BOSTON MAN HELD IN MURDER

LAWYERS GIVE TO BASKET FUND

Sherman L. Whipple and District Attorney Tufts Donate "Their Bit" to Aid Poor

Many Boston lawyers have contributed to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund to provide free Christmas dinners for hundreds of Greater Boston families.

Among the donors to the fund are District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex County and Sherman L. Whipple. Both of these men are leading members of the bar. They are regular contributors to the fund.

In sending his annual contribution District Attorney Tufts wrote: "I take pleasure in sending you herein check for $5 as a contribution to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston American. Your enterprise is a very worthy one, and it gives me much pleasure each year to add my feeble efforts to your mighty one to bring happiness to so many people."

MERCHANTS GIVE $50 EACH.

Mary E. Underwood, secretary to Mr. Whipple, wrote: "Mr. Whipple asked me to send you this check for $25 to the order of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund and to say that he takes pleasure in doing so."

H. E. Yerxa and James D. Casey, members of the firm of Cobb, Bates & Yerxa, sent checks for $50 each, repeating their donations of last season. Mr. Casey wrote:

"I am pleased to inclose herewith

Help This Woman Get Xmas Basket

After reading the following touching letter received from an eighty-year-old woman, send your contribution to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund so that this poor soul and others in equally hard straits may know the real meaning of Christmas:

"I have lived alone in a basement kitchen for almost three years. I have no relatives and am in my eightieth year. I am very lame and deaf and try to support myself by doing chores, but being lame and deaf no one wishes to employ me. The Boston American has sent me a Christmas basket for the past three years, and it has been a great blessing to me. Will you kindly remember me this Christmas, and probably God will reward you. Trusting that I have not offended you by writing, I remain."

FRESHMAN GONE 3 WEEKS

Robert Frankel, Wealthy New Yorker, Supposed to Be at Home

Providence, Nov. 15.—Robert Frankel, a wealthy freshman student at Brown University, has been missing for more than three weeks, during which time he has been neither seen nor heard from, either here or at his home at No. 410 Riverside Drive, New York city.

It was reported today that he had not been to classes since October 22, but up until last Saturday it had been supposed by every one that Frankel was at home.

The disappearance was first brought to light as the result of a letter sent by Bernard Simmons to the young man's father, M. Frankel, inquiring as to the disposal of certain of the young man's personal effects which

Tokio Salvationist Meeting Is Mobbed

Tokio, Nov. 15.—Salvation Army leaders will endeavor to hold tonight the silver jubilee celebration meeting which was broken up last night by a mob of anti-Christian Buddhists in the second Buddhist outbreak within twenty-four hours. The mob entered the hall being used by the Salvation Army, tore down the decorations and dispersed only after the Salvation Army leaders had adjourned the meeting.

BARNEY APPEARS AT AUTO TRIAL

Rumored He Would 'Squeal' on 'Pals' at Special Court Session

Rumors that Herman L. Barney was going to testify against former "pals" [illegible] Middlesex Superior Court, East Cambridge, at the opening of the special session to deal with auto thieving.

The rumor was rendered all the more persistent by the fact that the first case on the docket was that against John "Chick" Dillon, one of his closest friends and associates.

Dillon was charged with larceny and receipt of stolen cars and accessories on seven counts.

Barney himself was charged with larceny on thirteen counts. There are sixty-eight indictments, representing about twenty defendants in all. The cases will probably last ten days.

Barney was brought from his cell in Charlestown State Prison on a writ of habeas corpus, and faced the courtroom crowd with all his old audacity and ease of manner.

Constant clashes between counsel featured the opening of the cases.

Clarence W. Rowle and Edward P. Barry, appearing for several defendants, objected strenuously to the presence of Henry F. Hurlburt, who was deputized by Attorney-General Allen to conduct the trials.

Attorney Barry for Dillon, the first defendant called, filed a plea for abatement.

He also asked for a bill of particulars, to which Attorney Hurlburt declared it was too late. Judge Raymond, presiding, upheld Hurlburt.

Attorney Rowley took up the argument by objecting to Mr Hurlburt's presence in the case. He said Hurlburt was present at the special grand jury hearings which indicted Dillon and the others, and that he had no business there.

Mr. Rowley contended that only a district attorney or his assistant had a right to conduct Grand Jury hearings.

He put George Stanley Harvey, assistant district attornel, on the stand, and asked him if he was at the special Grand Jury hearing.

Mr. Harvey sold he had. Asked if Mr. Hurlburt was there he said he was.

Mr. Rowley declared notes were taken for Hurlburt, who was not a court officer of any kind, and was at the hearing illegally.

When Dillon's case was called the verbal cross-fire began again. Judge Raymoond finally suggested that the lawyers on both sides get together and find out on what they could agree.

When this suggestion was not productive of any agreement he adjourned court.

WHITNEY STEPSONS ARRESTED

Taken to Claremont for Grilling in Mystery of Woman's Disappearance

Langdon, N. H., Nov. 15.—Benjamin and Chester Doolittle, stepsons of Mrs. William B. Whitney, who the authorities believe was killed and buried on a farm here, were arrested today.

They were taken to Claremont for grilling by Chief of Police David F. White and a detective, who refused to disclose the charge against them.

Their arrest followed by a few hours the arrest of their father, William B. Whitney, who was taken into custody in Boston on a technical charge of forgery pending the clearing up of the mystery in Mrs. Whitney's disappearance.

Benjamin is twenty-four years old and Chester nineteen years old. James R. Wood, a Boston detective, said he was asked as to their knowledge of where their stepmother's body was buried and that they were held on a technicality pending further developments.

Meantime Whitney, after his arrest

TRACE AUTO IN DEATH OF 2 GIRLS

Mrs. Robert McCarthy, whose body was found on the lake front in Chicago. This photograph was sent to McCarthy's mother. On it he had written, "Mama, meet my wife.—Bob."

Robert McCarthy of Boston, who [illegible] the death of two stage girls in Chicago.

Robert McCarthy of No. 1323 Washington street, Boston, electrician in Jane Cowl's "Smilin' Through" company, has been detained by the Chicago police in connection with the mysterious deaths of two theatrical women, one of them said to be his wife, whose bodies were found in Grant Park, on the shore of Lake Michigan.

McCarthy was taken into custody with four others, following the discovery of the bruised and bleeding bodies of his wife, known as Marie Alma Ramey, and Lillian Thompson, said to be the wife of James McArdle, also a stage performer.

Identification was made after McCarthy and James G. We[illegible] of Salt Lake City, assistant electrician of the "Smilin' Through" company, who had been living with the women in a Dearborn street apartment, reported to the police that they were missing.

In a letter mailed on Friday, [illegible] days before the tragedy, and received by his mother in this city, McCarthy declared that he disliked Chicago, where he said more murders and other crimes were committed than in any city he had ever visited.

Hunnewell Myth Exploded

Lying sick in bed—where I have been for nearly two weeks—I have been reading the newspaper stories of the Sleeper Disbarment Case and wondering how many of the public imagine that the District Attorney of the Suffolk District, Mr. John P. Feeney, and myself were on trial for extortion.

If the two lawyers who spent two hours last Wednesday taking my story of the Hunnewell myth had allowed the truth as I told it to reach the court and the public instead of killing it by "agreement," there would be no reason for publishing this statement.

On July 21, 1920, at a hearing of the Bar Committee which examined exhaustively the $150,000 Hunnewell "blackmail" matter, Ex-Justice of the Supreme Court Henry N. Sheldon, chairman of the committee, said:

"As to that the committee feels that there is no room for accusation against anyone but Sleeper himself."

"I think it does appear that the charge we have been considering, resting in the alleged transactions at the Parker House, was unfounded, and I am very glad it does."

At the same time and place, referring to the $150,000 story, the only other member of the committee present, William G. Thompson, Esq., said:

"I think this investigation may be dropped as to you (Coakley). If I have anything to say about it, it will not be dropped as to Mr. Sleeper."

The current gossip of the gutter for the past few years would persuade the credulous that I spend most of my time in the criminal courts. This gossip has been invented and diligently cultivated by ex-convicts, crooks, dope fiends and "pimps" (I have their names), who have been and are on the payroll of the archfanatic.

The fact is that in the past ten years, I have had less than ten cases in the Criminal Court. During the previous ten years I had five hundred. For every one case I have had since Mr. Pelletier became District Attorney I had fifty during the incumbency of his predecessors.

What have these hirelings been doing to earn their money? Investigating? Not at all. They merely plant rumors, innuendoes, and systematically circulate stories of blackmail, by the District Attorney and myself, of this rich artist, or that statesman, or merchant, or banker, or big lawyer, taking pains always to mention a large sum of money paid at specific time and place, just as was done in this Hunnewell fiasco, supplementing the slander with the declaration "We've got them this time. The Bar Association is after them."

Starting thus in the underworld these yarns have, by dint of persistent repetition, for three years penetrated the circles of decent society, and have become the subject of whispered exchange at the bar, on the bench and in the club and wherever people gather who do not know the high character and integrity of Joseph C. Pelletier.

My praise can add not a cubit to his stature.

The honors and decorations which he has won not only in our own country but also abroad, distinguish him as the leading Catholic layman of Massachusetts.

Despite this (or should one say because of it), Mr. Godfrey L. Cabot, of the Watch and Ward Society, boasts that he has spent $100,000 in his campaign, and has arranged by will after his death to perpetuate his pursuit of the District Attorney.

As for me, the sum of my offending seems to be that in a minor way I am going up. As a car conductor, as a teamster, as a bartender, as a reporter, I seem to have escaped these cultured antagonisms which of late beset me. Perhaps it was a mistake, to have moved onward from these humble but honorable occupations. In the canons of my antagonists it is in such callings that I and such as I belong.

Even as a lawyer, arriving somewhat late in life, my career occasioned no alarm to anyone, until I got my head far enough above water to look horizontally at some of those on whom Fortune had pinned the blue ribbon. I, too, dared to ask and to receive large fees.

My clients were satisfied—not so the bigoted pack now yelping at my heels. They disapprove. I am practising "out of my set."

Their malicious attack will continue, although their plan of action will shift. They will mask their real motive by hiring a new "tackle" for their team—one whose name will serve to shield them from the suspicion that class and race and other things than justice inspire them.

But the attack will be met. Today I am on my back. Soon, please God, I'll be on my feet, to combat all the slanders which malice has invented, and only one of which has been publicly demolished. All the rest are of a piece with the Hunnewell yarn, as was pointed out by William G. Thompson, Esq., when at the Bar Committee meeting July 21, 1920, referring to the Sleeper statements he said: "Such statements (Parker House incident) have, in my opinion, been more than any single cause of setting all this mass of anecdotes afloat in this city. I think that the whole thing more or less clusters around that story."

"Mass of anecdote" is just the phrase to describe it. As the other slanders one by one are dragged into the open they will be exploded as has the Sleeper tale.

Sold Water to Ships for $1 a Ton

By International News Service.

New York, Nov. 15.—Water furnished by tugboats and costing but 15 cents a ton was sold to United States Shipping Board vessels at $1 per ton at Savannah, Ga., James A. McGregor, former representative of the operators' division of the Shipping Board, told the congressional investigators at today's hearing here today.

"These supplies included 1,000 fathoms of new rope," said Captain Chambliss, "although the Council Bluffs had just been completed at a Great Lakes shipbuilding plant and needed no new supplies.

"I refused to make such requisitions—which included addition of extra bulkheads—and resigned," said the witness.

"The Warren Transportation Company was a British firm and I decided that I'd prefer to work under the American flag and take orders from Americans," Captain Chambliss added.

MISSING MRS. WHITNEY'S STEPSONS ARE HELD FOR GRILLING

DOOLITTLE BOYS ARRESTED AND QUESTIONED

in Boston, was brought back here and arrangements were made to arraign him in Newport.

He continued to protest his innocence of both the alleged forgery and of any connection with his former wife's disappearance.

Search for the body of the missing woman was continued. The searchers planned to open an abandoned well in the rear of an old barn on the Whitney farm.

There is still five or ten feet of water in the second well being investigated yet to be pumped out. It was into this well that fifteen-year-old Johnny Doolittle Whitney told Mrs. Amanda French and others that his father tossed the body of his stepmother after he had crushed her head with a piece of wood, following a quarrel in the house.

MAY ORDER INQUEST.

County Solicitor Henry N. Hurd consulted Attorney General Oscar L. Young of Laconia, concerning the advisability of ordering an inquest in connection with the alleged death of Whitney's wife.

"Owing to new information concerning this case, I believe I will divert our activities just as soon as the work we are working on is finished, provided that it does not develop anything" said County Solicitor Hurd. "I am fully convinced that Mrs. Whitney was killed. I am confident of that, and my belief is substantiated by almost the entire community at Langdon, where the people have named the mystery with patience for four years, all the time angry that nothing has been done to clear up her disappearance.

BELIEVES MURDER COMMITTED.

"I started the investigation in 1916, but immediately retired from office, so the affair passed from my hands. It has always been my belief that murder had been committed, and since this investigation started I am even more convinced.

"It is a strong belief of mine, and many others have the same opinion, that if Mrs. Whitney was murdered the crime did not occur in the Whitney house, but in the highway on the morning that she started for Bellows Falls, Vt., to take a train for the West.

"If this well we are now cleaning out discloses nothing, our next step will be to open the well near the road at the deserted farm. Investigation four years ago showed that it had been partly filled with rocks, and others probing the case then believed that they could feel a soft body of something when they probed with a pole. A woman's shoe was found but a short distance away. It was the general belief among Langdon residents at that time that this well was the one meant when John Doolittle told the alleged stories about the possible murder of his stepmother.

Johnny Doolittle, again questioned by detectives, still sticks to the story he told them Saturday. He disclaims all knowledge of having told the high sheriff that he saw his father hit his stepmother over the head with a piece of wood. He admitted that he "might have told Mrs French about his stepmother's body being in the well. What grounds he had for making that statement he could not explain, he said.

Chief of Police Whiting of Claremont is working on the case with the Boston detectives today. They are investigating the absence of two stoves that were used the time Mrs. Whitney vanished.

Whitney and his second wife occupied a bedroom off the dining room near one of the missing stoves. The heavy sticks of wood which were burned in the stove were kept in a box in the corner. A hot air register leads to a room above, adjacent to the sleeping room of Johnny.

It was through this aperture that the latter alleged he heard the quarrel between his father and stepmother, according to his first story. It would be impossible for him to see his father strike his stepmother unless they were underneath.

Where Soviet Is Crushing Foes in Russia

Lenin's army, which has been concentrating for an attack on General Wrangel's "anti-Red" forces, has practically destroyed the last big obstacle to Soviet domination of all Russia in Europe. The Crimea is being swept clean and refugees are fleeing to Constantinople, which, according to reports, may be attacked by the Bolshevik armies.

had been left in his room. Mr. Frankel telegraphed immediately of his ignorance of the whereabouts of his son, and himself arrived in Providence Saturday afternoon.

The young man left all his belongings in the room occupied by him in the dormitory quarters of one of the fraternities. This room was sublet by the fraternity, and not by the college itself, to the missing man, and when Frankel presumably left college was let again to Simmons.

At first it was supposed that young Frankel might be visiting the home of a friend, Everett Clark of Worcester, son of the famous trap-shooter. Investigation revealed, however, that he had not been seen by Clark since late in the Summer. Simmons himself has never even seen young Frankel.

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 15.—The remnants of General Wrangel's army in Crimea continue in full retreat, but without panic, according to official dispatches received by the war office today. The telegrams said that the evacuation of the remaining towns held by General Wrangel's troops has proceeded satisfactorily, despite heavy losses in men and material.

The annihilation of General Wrangel's anti-Bolshevik army will strengthen the Soviet government at Moscow, in the opinion of the Daily Express. Commenting today upon the collapse of Wrangel's anti-Red military venture, this newspaper said:

GAIN FOR BOLSHEVIK

"The French may well be disappointed and perhaps a little ashamed that they, as well as the other allies, have wasted lives and money with the only result that the Bolshevik hold on Russia has been made more secure."

"General Wrangel's army has been virtually wiped out," said a dispatch to the Daily Express from Constantinople dated Sunday. "A host of Red cavalry is sweeping down upon Sebastopol. They are in the outskirts of the city.

"General Barbovitch with a handful of devoted followers from General Wrangel's forces are fighting valiantly in the suburbs of Sebastopol trying to hold back the Reds until the last of the refugees are on shipboard. General Wrangel, his last hope of victory blasted, worked calmly throughout Saturday directing the evacuation of Sebastopol."

KILLING AND LOOTING.

A second Constantinople dispatch to the Daily Express said that General Wrangel had arranged to take refuge on the French warship Waldeck Rousseau. The telegram added:

"The so-called green troops (anti-Bolshevik faction in Crimea) have joined up with the riff-raff and are creating a reign of terror. They are looting towns and murdering on the wholesale.

"Thirteen thousand refugees are on their way to Constantinople. Preference is being given to women, children and wounded soldiers. Able-bodied men have to take their chances in getting away from Sebastopol before the Reds enter."

The British Admiralty today officially denied reports from Constantinople that the British naval units in the Black Sea are blockading Southern Russia. No British warships have left Constantinople, it was said.

SIX HELD AFTER 100 THEFTS

Woman Among the Suspects Taken by Boston Police in Looting of Autos

Patrolmen Sullivan and McGovern of the County Square Station today arrested five men and a woman as suspicious persons in connection with more than 100 robberies of valuables from parked automobiles.

The loot includes handbags, suitcases, robes and fur coats, and is said to run into the thousands of dollars.

No definite charge has been placed against the six prisoners, but the police believe them to be members of a well-organized band of thieves.

They declare the woman is the "queen" of the gang.

The arrests followed the theft of three suit cases and a fur overcoat from a car parked in Somerset street early today. The owner of one name the police are withholding, reported the theft, together with a description of two men he had seen loitering near his car.

Patrolmen Sullivan and McGovern found the two men described. From information obtained from them, he effected the arrest of the woman and the other three men in a West End rooming house.

HUB MAN HELD IN DEATH OF 2

Robert McCarthy Detained While Police Investigate Cases of Stage Girls

CARRIED IN AUTOS.

The police theory that the women were murdered elsewhere and their bodies taken to the park in an automobile was strengthened today by an unidentified informant. He told the proprietor of the undertaking rooms where the victims' remains lie, that he had seen two men attempting to drag two young women into an automobile at Michigan avenue and South Water street. These women, he said, answered the description of the slain stage girls.

Another possible clue was the identification of the "mystery man" who the police believe telephoned them the first news of the murder. He was George Dixon, a special agent for Conkling, Price & Webb, insurance agents. The call was traced to the office of this firm, but Dixon denied having made it. He did admit making two calls from the office yesterday, but asserted neither of them had to do with finding the bodies.

MARRIED SIX MONTHS.

At the McCarthy home in this city, it was said that the young couple had been married for the past six months, and letters received every week indicated that they were very happy. Letters mailed last Friday were received today from both McCarthy and his wife.

The girl thanked her sister-in-law in one of these letters for a photograph she had sent, and declared she was anxious to meet Robert's mother, but that it was impossible at present. McCarthy, in his communication, expressed the wish that he might come to Boston for Christmas, but feared he could not do so.

His mother said that the couple always hired an apartment in the city where they were playing, and that the girl did all of the cooking, while all her husband's shirts, and did the housework.

It was said that Miss Thompson, whose home was believed to be in one of the suburbs of Boston, had been seeking a divorce from James McArdle, a Carnival dancer performer. Her stage activities had been chiefly confined to Carnival companies, while Miss Ramey was a vaudeville performer and well-known member of several stock companies.

The Chicago police were frankly baffled by the mystery, although convinced that the crime took place some distance from the spot where the bodies were found. An inquest was held today and in the meantime the bodies of the two girls were held at the morgue awaiting the action of the coroner.

HOLD GROCERS AND COOK.

Three men held by the police are Silvio and Peter Citti, proprietors of a grocery store, and James Comar, a cook, said to have been associated with the victims.

McCarthy and Meeks, who said they had been living with the two girls in an apartment at No. 609 North Dearborn street, made the identifications.

They were taken into custody, as were Silvio and Peter Citti, after it had been learned that the women obtained wine at their store Saturday evening a few hours before their death. Comas, it was said, had told the victims they might obtain wine at Citti's.

CUT AND BRUISED.

The police believe that the young women were killed, following a struggle and their bodies transported in an automobile and thrown out at the lonely spot where they were found. This would be shielded from the park by an embankment. Pools of blood near by and cuts and bruises indicated that the victims had fought their assailants.

The Ramey girl was lying face down, one hand stretched ahead, the other trailing behind. This hand was covered with blood. Examination showed that it had been deeply cut between the fourth and fifth fingers. The other girl lay face upward, with a heavy trimmed cape thrown over her head. The bodies were still warm.

A single clew on which the police are at work is the tracks of a diamond toned tired automobile, clearly defined, leading into Grant Park to the spot where the bodies were found. There is a deeper indentation where the car had stopped near the bodies.

One of the girls appeared to have been thrown from the rear of the car and the other from the side. Identification was made when McCarthy and Meeks reported to the police that the women were missing.

The mysterious man for whom the police are seeking went to the Insurance Exchange Building in Chicago early Sunday morning and asked the elevator operator to take him to the fourteenth floor, the police say.

From the offices of Conkling, Price & Webb, insurance men, he telephoned the police that the bodies of the dead girls were lying on the lake front. Police traced the call, but the man had vanished.

Venizelos Winning in Greek Election

By International News Service.

Athens, Nov. 15.—Early returns today from the general elections throughout Greece on Sunday showed the political faction of Premier Venizelos leading in almost every community.

There were indications that the faction supporting former King Constantine was badly defeated. There were no disorders.

Political capital was made of the court decision handed down Saturday affirming the validity of the morganatic marriage of the late King Alexander and Aspasia Manos, daughter of a former Greek army officer.

The court rejected the claim of former King Constantine to Alexander's estate.

The wreath was placed on the sign by Comrade Joseph Buckley and volleys were fired by a firing squad and taps followed. The Rev. Thomas Dilhoity, C.SS.R., gave the invocation.

GIRL SUICIDE'S FRIENDS OFFER REWARD FOR RABBI'S CAPTURE

WANTED ON PERJURY CHARGE

Near Riot Threatens When Louwisch Is Defended at Poughkeepsie Mass Meeting

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 15.—At a mass meeting of indignant citizens here, a reward of $200 was voted for the arrest of Rabbi Joseph Louwisch, former principal of the Hebrew school, who is declared a fugitive from justice. He is charged with subornation of perjury, after Supreme Court Justice Morschauser reviewed the proceedings for a nulment brought against Shewa Levine Louwisch, the rabbi's bride, who committed suicide.

The meeting in Masonic Temple nearly broke up in a riot when Nathan Hyman, a friend of Louwisch, jumped up, shouting that the man had been punished enough.

ASKS TRUSTEES TO RESIGN.

Immediately the entire audience was on its feet shouting and gesticulating. The chairman was forced to call upon men to forcibly put Hyman to his seat. Within a few moments, as the demonstration against Louwisch waxed more noisy, Hyman walked out amid jeers.

Interest is now centered in the board of trustees of the Poughkeepsie Hebrew School, of which the rabbi was principal. Four members concerned themselves in the case in several speeches. The name of Mr. Cus J. Feasler, president of the board, was introduced, and his resignation, as well as those of other trustees, was demanded. The charge was made that efforts were exerted to keep anyone interested in the school away from the meeting.

CHARGE TEACHER COERCED.

It was also charged that one of the teachers, who had tried to prevent Louwisch from attempting to secure an annulment of his marriage, was forced to resign his position.

Resolutions were passed thanking Justice Joseph Morschauser, District Attorney Aldrich and James E. Carrol for their work in the case. All the speakers expressed themselves as intensely happy over the fact that the dead bride's good name had been officially cleared by the court.

CAN SEE WORLDS OF FUTURE

With Opera Glass One Is Able to Observe Them in the Making

Do you know that by looking at the sky through an ordinary field glass on any bright night that you can see the cradle of future universes—future moons, stars, suns and earths?

True, you will not see definite outlines of such universes, but you will see what in time will develop into them, and a body similar, perhaps, to what this good old earth was once a part.

What you will actually see is an enormous mass of blazing gas, that appears from the earth to be nothing more than a constellation of stars.

This famous napla body—important to the students of astronomy and to the future order of things in the world—has come to be known by the savants of astronomy as "The Famous Nebula in the Constellation of Andromeda."

These interesting things were told to the American today by Attorney Michael J. Jordan, a member of the Variable Star Observers' Association, and one of the leading astronomers in the country.

FORM NEW UNIVERSES.

"The remarkable thing about the Nebula," according to Mr. Jordan, "is that it will cool down in the course of time and form new universes, new suns, new stars, moons and planets.

"This body of matter is so far away that it takes light traveling at the rate of six billions of miles a year, over more than 100 years to reach us. We are now seeing light which started to come here from there 100 years ago.

"In other words, if we started for the United States with the light at this time that James Madison was President, we would just be arriving. It would take an express train traveling at sixty miles an hour millions of years to cross the Nebula, it is so big.

"One of the interesting discoveries of recent times is that a star in order to be a morning star must rise before the sun. If a star rises after the sun has risen its power will be affected and therefore will be visible.

"One of the most interesting of all astronomical phenomena is the 'Giant Sun Arcturus.' This star is very much larger than the sun we see, this star moves at an enormous rate of speed, happily not directly toward us, but in an oblique direction.

"It is strange, but most people believe that stars are stationary. This is not true, however, as everything in the entire universe is moving at an enormous rate of speed at all times.

"The extraordinary thing about Arcturus is that while it is now seen in the northern hemisphere, in the course of ages it will be visible in the southern hemisphere.

MILLION DIED IN U. S. IN 1919

Death Rate, 12.9, Is Lowest Recorded; Nearly 10,000 Sucides Reported

There were 1,096,456 deaths in the continental United States in 1919, according to figures made public today by the Census Bureau at Washington.

That is only 12.9 per 1,000 population, the lowest death rate since the registration was established.

The absence of the virulent epidemics which have swept the country in recent years is given as the principal cause of the falling off.

Organic heart disease was the principal cause of death. There were 111,579 such deaths.

Tuberculosis was second, accounting for 106,985. Pneumonia was third, with 105,213.

Other causes were: Acute nephritis and Bright's disease, 75,995; cancer and other malignant tumors, 65,551; influenze, 64,115; appendicitis, 10,029; suicide, 9,732; bronchitis, 10,913; typhoid, 7,869; whooping cough, 4,711; malaria, 2,343; small pox, 358; rheumatism, 3,907.

Hawaii is not included in the figures, although death rigistration has been inaugurated there.

Called for 'Millicent' in Sleep, Wife Charges

Endearing notes, scribbled in shorthand by Aldis Hall, head of a chain of barber and music schools in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other cities, to Mrs. Milicent E. Ellis, fifty years old, figured as evidence in the suit for divorce brought before Judge Bell in the Suffolk County Court today by Mrs. Marie C. Hall.

Two sons of the plaintiff, Walter and Edward Hall, took the stand and testified in behalf of their mother and against their father.

According to the evidence, Hall first became infatuated with Mrs. Ellis, then a woman of 25, about 26 years ago, when she was living in their apartment and taking a course in stenography at the business college he was conducting here in Boston.

Mrs. Hall, herself a stenographic expert, read the shorthand notes aloud in court for the benefit of the judge.

She became aware of what was going on, testified Mrs. Hall, when her husband began calling her "Millicent" in his sleep. Later, she says, he admitted his infatuation for Mrs. Ellis.

When she was living in an apartment in Buffalo, Mrs. Hall added, Hall sent Mrs. Ellis to her with the decorations and other equipment for a home and make a home for her. This Mrs. Hall refused to do, and Hall cancelled the order and moved into the apartment and she was forced to find a position for herself with a firm of attorneys in Pittsburg.

Hall has made it a custom, his wife testified, to fit up apartments for himself and Mrs. Ellis in each of all his barber schools both here and in other cities.

Hall was not in court, nor was Mrs. Ellis. Judge Bell took the case under advisement.

Captain McGregory said the plumbing of vessels turned out by the submarine boat corporation proved faulty and that in the case of two ships of speed, happily not directly toward us, but in an oblique direction.

"It is strange, but most people believe that stars are stationary. This is not True, however, as everything in the entire universe is moving at an enormous rate of speed at all times.

"The extraordinary thing about Arcturus is' that while it is now seen in the northern hemisphere, in the course of ages it will be visible in the southern hemisphere.

6 CHILDREN DIE IN FIRE PANIC

Proprietors of Picture House and Porter Accused in East Side Tragedy

New York, Nov. 15.—Stampeded by the cry of "fire" patrons of a moving picture theatre on Cherry street today, six of the first of six children of ages from two to thirteen. Eight others were injured.

A fire was being built in the furnace in the basement under the theatre. The smoke penetrating the floor above frightened the audience and the cry of "fire" arose.

There was a mad rush for the exit. The greater part of the audience was made up of Italians. The killed and injured were chiefly Italian.

NAMES OF DEAD.

The dead are:

Tessie Guidice, aged eight; Elmira Alpini, thirteen; Joseph Rambola, eleven; Joseph Lombardi, two; Dominico Mancuello, two; Pasquale Cunisi, eleven.

In the hospitals eight children are suffering from broken limbs and many from a possible fracture of the skull. In the homes hardby are scores who received slight injuries.

The proprietors of the theatre and a porter were held on technical charges of manslaughter following several hours of an inquiry into the tragedy by Assistant District Attorney Benedict D. Dineen.

PROBE STARTED.

Two investigations into the tragedy were instituted today, one by Mayor Hylan and the other by the district attorney's office. District Attorney Swann said that steps would be taken before the Grand Jury immediately.

"It is a terrible state of affairs when grasping leeches will play with the lives of children for the sake of the money involved," said the District Attorney. "I have been informed that some of the movie houses have questionable guardians' who stand outside and buy tickets for children and take them inside, then go out and buy tickets for other children. I shall prosecute this case to the utmost and see that the law prohibiting the admittance of minors without reliable adults will hereafter be enforced."

Mrs. Smart Finds a Nice Flat

By KITTY PARSONS

"I know I asked you to come with me, but I really want to look at apartments again—you don't mind, do you, dearie? I mean are we ready to vacate by the end of the week and Harry won't put himself out to look for anything unless he knows what men are my dear. Why, when we moved last time, will you believe me, he never even hung a picture—just ordered nights at the office on purpose to get out of the fuss and bother of the while thing.

"Yes, I have the address of one place—there are only three left in the city today. It's right around the corner from here; I like this street, don't you—so many automobiles parked along the curb always lends tone to the neighborhood.

Are you the janitor of this building? No, here we are—No. 49—ring the bell.

Are you the janitor of this building? No, I'm not. I hear you have a spacious apartment to let.

You don't say so—three rooms, Gertie, counting the bath kitchenette as one room; that's really more than I expected to find. Let us see it, please. How much did you say the rent was? Only $200 a month.

CHILDREN? THE VERY IDEA!

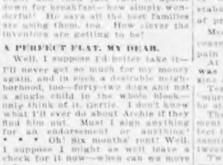
Yes, it is reasonable—for so much space of course. And you say the children would have no objection to our taking boarders if need should arise? Why, that's very nice. Oh, no—CERTAINLY NOT—no children! That is, of course, Mrs. Archie but I'm sure you and we really consider him quite grown up—as a matter of fact, my husband is a little younger than Archie—then he'd get worse as they grow older, don't you think so, Gertie?

There is no objection to dogs, I hope? I'm so glad—Watson Dyer is really a member of the family—we're quite devoted to him. Does a garage go with the place? And the washerwoman can park her car there for the day too—Really, that's the best thing that's come my way—too good to be true, don't you think so, Gertie? Yes, I really do, I know you have four rooms but remember you have seven in fashion's list—I'm getting better than the last one we looked at—you know, the one with the closet that they counted as a room and then raised and charged $50 more a month for.

I think you're right—you can always manage if you have to. I plan to use those bookcase beds in the living room—instead of using the baby grand piano as a sort of guest room—it could be done you know, dear.

HOW COMMON, GERTIE!

Why did you say the last tenants are leaving this apartment?



—I usually do whenever I get a new check book—it saves so much time when you're down at the shopping and decide to buy something suddenly—so handy when carrying a lot of cash with you, too.

Yes, tomorrow afternoon, dearie—I'll call on Archie's little dog—and a husband. Oh, Gertie—don't say anything about Archie's having to work nights in the boarding school! Come along, dearie.

GRANGERS GO TO PLYMOUTH

Thirty States Represented at Clambake Which Is Held on Historic Ground

More than 300 Grangers, in Boston to attend the annual meeting of the National Grange, visited Plymouth and hardly took notice of the wealth of historic interest. They were guests there of Mayflower Pomona and before returning to Boston to conduct the business of the convention were guests at a clambake given by their organization.

Thirty States were represented in the party and the delegates left the historic towns in a special train over the New Haven road.

Boston delegates were resigned at Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, in the late afternoon. Resolutions were offered and a number of other routine reports were read. The election of officers was planned for tomorrow.

Election of officers is said to be filled in a membership on the executive committee in place of N. B. Cady of Massachusetts, a place on the board of managers of the National Grange and a place on the executive board of Illinois. The terms of each of these officers expire this session.

Executive committee elected at Plymouth Rock in charge of Leslie H. Smith, master of the Massachusetts Grange. Addresses were made by Mr. Smith, by National Master S. J. Lowell and Tyng Greenough, master of the Grange of Michigan, master of the Grange of that State.

Capt. Chew and Beautiful Wife Arrested on Charge of Looting Apartment

Washington, Nov. 15.—Captain Beverly Grayson Chew, U. S. A., and his beautiful wife, Mrs. Marjorie Blanche Chew, both prominent in Washington society, were held in $5,000 bail here charged with grand larceny.

Furs, laces and other valuables, worth $10,000, were found in their fashionable Stoneleigh Court where the formerly had an apartment, were alleged by police to be found in their possession. Both denied guilt.

Captain Chew is an infantry officer stationed at Camp Meade, Md. He was wounded in the war. He gave his age as thirty-eight and his wife's as twenty-seven.

Most of the articles were missing from the apartment of Mrs. Mary McClintock, which Captain and Mrs. Chew occupied during the latter part of September, while Mrs. Miller was on a visit to Atlantic City.

Following the arrest detectives went to the apartment occupied by the couple at a local hotel and recovered a sealskin wrap, valued at $400, that Mrs. Richard Hoglund, of Maryland, in this city, had reported stolen from the Army and Navy Club last Friday night. They also recovered a necklace reported stolen from the apartment of Mrs. Mary McClintock's apartment.

Captain Chew declared that he had sent an army locker to the Union Station from Stoneleigh court, but added that the locker found was his.

TROOPS FIRE ON IRISH CROWD

One Girl Dead, Women and Children Wounded in New Battle With British

Several women and girls were shot down in the streets of Dublin by British soldiers today, according to dispatches from Ireland.

The shootings were commonly part of the new "blind and cruel" policy of the constabulary and the troops, which have declared war to the death on the Irish Volunteers.

Annie O'Neill, a twelve-year-old girl, was instantly killed when soldiers fired into a crowd of civilians.

Other women and girls were struck by stray bullets or trampled in the mad stampede of the unarmed multitude, according to Dublin correspondents.

In line with the announced policy of "blood and iron" soldiers and constabulary raided fifty swelling houses of prominent Republicans.

Men and women were warned to cease their patriotic activities on pain of physical harm or even death.

At the same time a grim reminder was published in the monthly magazine of the national constabulary.

Terming the Irish Volunteers a "murder gang," it declared they must be stamped out at all hazards.

The nation ended with the statement: "The constabulary must proceed to the end without any outside measures. It is war to the death between us and them."

Two of the British policemen who were wounded when a lorry with bombs exploded was accidentally set alight at Liverpool, near Tipperary, saturday, are dead, the Irish office in London announced today. Another policeman was made a cripple and a policeman who was attacked and wounded at Ballybrack is dead.

While the events in Dublin overshadowed all other happenings here in Ireland, keen interest was being manifested in the fate of the nine Cork hunger strikers, who began their hunger strike last week, on orders from Arthur Griffith.

Prison physicians stated they would be out of danger within six weeks, according to dispatches from Cork.

The men were described as "living skeletons, but all are showing slight improvement.

They were on infants' diet. Today they were given the first ounce of pounded plaice and milk. Tomorrow they will be given boiled chicken.

Dr. Pearson, the British doctor in charge of the prisoners, issued the following statement: "I started feeding the men at 8 o'clock Friday. Their first nourishment consisted of a spoonful of men water, consisting of the white of an egg, beaten up with milk. This was managed with cod liver oil.

"Each day since then I gave them their second meal. It was one teaspoonful of meat juice and two and half ounces of milk.

"The prisoners are frightfully emaciated. Their limbs are no thicker than walking sticks. It will take a year to build them back to normal."

The government physicians later declared that the hunger strikers were dying and walked about unmolested, although objects of considerable interest in the prison grounds.

THREE HAITIAN PROBES PLANNED BY CONGRESS

Washington, Nov. 15.—No fewer than three sets of resolutions will be introduced tomorrow demanding a sweeping investigation into the American administration in Haiti as soon as Congress convenes, it was learned today.

Representative William A. Rodenberg, of Illinois, stated flatly that he will demand a thorough probe into the charges made by President Dartiguenave of Haiti, that Arthur Bailly-Blanchard, the American minister, and Colonel John A. McIlhenny, financial adviser, had failed to carry out the terms of the Haitian-American treaty.

At least two Senators are drafting similar resolutions for submission to the Senate, it was learned today by Senator Borah, who stated today, however, that he is not one of them.

Other prominent Bostonians who are among the latest contributors are R. D. Agassiz, Chester Snow and Franklin W. Hobbs.

City Clerk James Donovan sent his annual contribution of $10 with the following expression of good will: "It gives me great pleasure to contribute to so worthy a cause as the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund. I think everyone who can should deem it a duty to give that these less fortunate may know the joys and happiness of Christmas. Not doing so is not to know the real meaning and spirit of the day. I wish the Boston American success in its annual undertaking."

ANONYMOUS GIFT OF $10.

A woman who desired her name kept secret sent $10 with the following message: "It makes me very happy to have the privilege of doing this, and I shall be a staunch follower as long as you keep the good work up."

Among the Basket Fund helpers who are extendin a great deal of aid to the cause this year are: John E. and Cornelius F. Bowen of the trucking firm of C. Bowen. Mrs. Elizabeth A. Stearns of Roxbury is giving all her spare time in behalf of the fund.

Among the recent appeals for food is that of a young boy:

"Will you please send us a basket for Christmas? My father has been sick for a year and cannot work, and my mother is sickly too. My brother is the oldest, and is the only one working in the house. Please do not forget us this Christmas or we will not have any dinner."

A Roxbury widow wrote:

"Would you please send me one of your Christmas baskets? I am a widow with one son, and he has been laid up quite a while. I am not able to work, and find it very hard to get along on what my boy makes. Hoping you will think of us, and thanking you, I remain——"

The wife of a blind man and the mother of six small children wrote:

"I am writing you a few lines to ask you if you would send me a Christmas basket as I have a blind husband and six small children. It is heartbreaking to see others with plenty and see my own little ones go without. I hope you won't forget us."

PLEA OF TEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL.

A ten-year-old girl appealed for a basket as follows:

"I am a little girl ten years old. My father is dead and I have two small brothers. My big sister is laid off, so you see it is going to be pretty hard for ma—so will you please send us something. I will thank you very much if you do."

A blind woman wrote:

"I understand that you have been kind to poor people, and I am one of them. I have been blind for four years, and I have used all the money I have saved. If there is any aid given to anybody please remember me."

A child wrote:

"I am a boy nine years old. Please send us a Christmas basket. We are very poor. My father is dead. I am afraid we won't know it is Christmas if you forget us. My mother is sick and can't work. Please send us a Christmas basket."

Another child wrote:

"Could you please send us a basket as we have no father and our mother works very hard. The basket would help us very much if you could spare one and make us happy Christmas day. I have been trying hard to get work as I am only fourteen, but cannot get any work, and my mother is not able to work—so please try and send us a basket."

The following letter was written by another child:

"Would you please send us a basket. My father is blind for two years, and I am twelve years old and have a brother thirteen years old and one ten years old. My mother has to go out to work to support the family. It is very hard for us to get along as it is getting cold, and we have no coal nor any warm clothes. Thanking you in advance and hoping you will not forget us this Christmas. I am ——"

A BIG FAMILY TO FEED.

A child whose father is not working wrote:

"Will you please give my mother a basket as we are very poor and my father is out of work. This is the first year I ever asked. My father said if he works next year he will pay you back. Please help us. I have three sisters, too."

A twelve-year-old girl wrote:

"I am writing to you to ask you if you will please help me to spend a happy Christmas. My father has not worked since last Summer, as there is no work to be done, and he is in very poor health. I have two brothers and two sisters, and my father and mother. The oldest is fifteen years old, and he had to leave school to work at a farmhouse, where he gets very little pay.

"He is the only support of our house, so you can realize how hard it is to get along. My mother is in very poor health and is very weak, as she went under a very serious operation less than a year ago. I could never tell you how we would appreciate a Christmas basket from you. I am a small girl of twelve with two sisters, ten and thirteen, and two brothers, eleven and three. I am ending my letter now, hoping to receive a basket from you Christmas."

MOLLENHAUER CONDUCTS AT CONVENTION HALL

Convention Hall was filled yesterday afternoon to hear a Symphony concert by the People's Symphony Orchestra, an orchestra of union musicians conducted by Emil Mollenhauer, which played a novel and interesting program of music of the better sort.

The opportunity to hear symphonic music well played has never before been offered to the Boston public at popular prices and the increasing attendance at these Convention Hall concerts is the best evidence that they are appreciated.

LEAGUE OPENS AT GENEVA

"Hopes of Millions Upon Us," Says Belgian Foreign Minister Hymans

By International News Service.

Geneva, Nov. 15.—Despite non-participation by the United States, the delegates to the first meeting of the assembly of the League of Nations today announced their readiness to take up at once the world problems of the future. The future potency of the league may hinge upon the outcome of the present meeting.

Standing before a cheap wooden desk with a background of potted palms, Foreign Minister Paul Hymans of Belgium rapped for order shortly after 11 o'clock and the meeting was under way.

"The hopes of millions of peoples of all nations are upon us as we begin our labors here today," said M Hymans. "The end of history's greatest conflict has left the world exhausted and full of doubts and fears. We commence a new world era in which men hope to settle sanely and in all reasonableness their differences and to end armed quarrels."

EARLY IN SEATS.

Most of the delegates of the forty-one nations represented were in their seats an hour or so before the meeting was called to order.

President Motta of the Swiss Federation welcomed the delegates in behalf of switzerland in an appropriate little speech.

Paul Hymans, Belgian foreign minister, was chosen president of the session. The vote was: M. Hymans, 34; President Motta of Switzerland, 8; Leon Bourgeois of France 1.

The delegates were seated in alphabetical order and a place was reserved for the Americans, despite the fact that the United States is not a member of the league. Reservations were made according to the French spelling of the various nations. If the United States were represented the American delegates would occupy the seats reserved for "Etats Unis" between Spain and France.

The delegates applauded when President Motta expressed the hope that the United States "would soon fill her vacant seat." All delegates were present but Honduras and Liberia.

FIRST DISAPPROVAL.

The first murmur of disapproval arose on Sunday when it was announced that Lord Robert Cecil would represent South Africa instead of General J. C. Smuts. Some of the Scandinavian delegates informally suggested that an amendment be adopted preventing delegates from sitting in the future unless they are bona fide residents of the countries they represent.

The Japanese delegates have been active here for a week and unless persuaded otherwise by powerful friends probably will press their resolution for racial equality.

Water Left on, Pipes in Cottages Burst

Summer residents of Hull and Nantasket have provided plenty of work for the plumbers. Damage to the extent of several thousand dollars was done to property by bursting water pipes.

The owners have been spending week-ends at their summer residences and failed to turn the water off when leaving. As a result the cold weather of the past week caused the pipes to burst, flooding the houses, deserving furniture and in some cases damaging the building.

About twenty houses have been reported to the Hull police following the bursting of the pipes. The patrolmen in many cases acted as voluntary "first aid plumbers," turning the water off in the houses before much damage had been done.

New York, Nov. 15.—"Smiling Father Jim" is dead. He was the Rev. James H. Flood, assistant rector of the Holy Rosary Church and known far and wide for his genial disposition. He was moderator of the Young Men's Holy Rosary Lyceum of New York. He died suddenly in the church rectory. He was forty-one years old.

NAVY FIREBRAND IS RECALLED

U. S. Commander Ellyson Cleared Decks for Action When Ordered Out of Canal

Washington, Nov. 15.—Commander Theodore G. Ellyson, in charge of the destroyer Brooks, has been ordered home from European waters after nearly precipitating new hostilities between the United States and Germany at Kiel, it was learned today.

When the Brooks dropped anchor in Kiel the Germans sent word to her commander that permission to anchor had not been given and that he had better proceed to sea.

Ellyson reported that he had been ordered into Kiel by his admiral, that he had hoisted a signal requesting an anchorage, and having received no response, had settled down and intended to stay.

Next came a threat from the forts that if Brooks did not leave at once they would open fire.

Ellyson's reply was immediate and eloquent. He cleared decks for action and told the Germans to go ahead and he would take care of himself. Nothing happened and next day Brooks joined the squadron and proceeded to Reval. It is not clear here whether Ellyson is to be reprimanded or complimented.

RED CROSS HAS BIG RESPONSE

Campaign for $200,000 Fund Well Under Way All Over Boston

The intensive drive for the $200,000 fund which the Boston Metropolitan Red Cross is conducting got well under way today.

Booths were opened at the North and South stations and in various banking institutions, the American Legion tent on Tremont street, the Central Postoffice and a number of the larger hotels.

Results of the appeals for the campaign made by Governor Coolidge and scores of clergymen in their pulpits all over Greater Boston showed with the opening of the morning mail.

Miss Dorothy Forbes, chairman of the donation committee, announced contributions received had been heavier than at any time during the campaign, which opened Armistice Day and will last through Thanksgiving Day.

From every one of the thirty-six districts into which Boston has been divided came assurances that the house-to-house canvass is progressing encouragingly, said Mrs. C. C. Ely, chairman of the Roll-Call Committee.

Mrs. William Russell, Miss Phyllis Twombley and Mrs. Clarence Burrage will preside at the booth in the Copley-Plaza. Mrs. Conover Fitch, Miss Mary Bremer and Miss Lucy Harding will be on duty at the Touraine and Mrs. Malcolm Donald and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow, Jr., have agreed to take charge of the booths at the Parker House and Young's.

SOMERVILLE MAN SEEKS HIS MISSING BROTHER

James F. Keeley of No. 107 Medford street, Somerville, is searching for his brother, Edward, aged nineteen years, from whom he has been separated since they were children in the "Brick Bottom" section of Somerville. Edward Keeley for several years made his home with a family just outside of Boston, and when he reached his eighteenth birthday, he disappeared and has not been seen or heard from since that time. The brother in Somerville has combed Greater Boston in a vain endeavor to locate him and now appeals to the Boston American to aid him in the search.

One Thomas Bolsover

In 1743, Thomas Bolsover, a mechanic, was laboring in the attic of a little house in the town of Sheffield, England. He was mending a knife, the handle of which was composed partly of silver and partly of copper.

By accident, he fused the two metals so that they were as one, but with a copper basis and a silver surface. From this lucky mishap dates the discovery of "Sheffield plate" as this copper rolled plate has become known.

Although the first pieces of Sheffield were small snuff boxes, buttons and buckles,—larger pieces were soon made so that we find beautiful examples of all types of silver in Queen Anne, Adam, Empire and George III. designs.

During the week of November 15th, we have on exhibition a collection of Sheffield plate both antique and modern. With it are also examples of early American coin silver and many beautiful pieces of modern sterling silver. We shall be glad to have you visit this display.

A Meal that Appeals to a Hungry Man

THICK slices of roast beef — and rice, boiled southern style, make a meal that can't be beaten. The rice should be cooked so that each flake stands alone. Then the meat gravy should be poured over it. There's nothing more delicious.

There isn't a meal that you can't serve rice with. Eat it with sugar and cream for breakfast. Make it into a tasty dish for lunch. Serve it as a vegetable for dinner. Eat rice as you do potatoes with gravy or butter on it. Eat it every day. There is no better food than rice—and American rice is the finest in the world.

It only takes one cupful to make enough for a family of five. Any that's left can be combined with leftover meats and made into many appetizing dishes. Rice is never wasted. There are over three hundred ways to prepare it. It is the most economical food.

Rice is the most healthful food, too. It nourishes. It builds strength and sustains it through long working hours. It promotes healthy growth in children. Rice digests more quickly and easily than any other food.

ASSOCIATED RICE MILLERS OF AMERICA, Inc., New Orleans, La.

Follow this Master Recipe

Out of the sunny south comes this master recipe for cooking rice. It is so simple, that anyone by following it can easily cook rice the first time they try.

Wash rice thoroughly in a strainer. Use a deep porcelain or agateware kettle. To four cups of boiling water add one level teaspoonful of salt. Then add one cup of washed rice so slowly that water continues to boil. Lift rice occasionally with fork, and shake kettle so that no kernels stick to bottom. But—this is important—never stir the rice. Boil twenty minutes. Then pour water off, if any, and place in open oven where it will finish swelling without burning. Each grain will stand alone, plump, tender, and delicious.

Consult any standard cook book for a number of excellent recipes for rice. Here are a few others.

CABBAGE WITH RICE

Boil a head of cabbage until tender, drain and cut out the heart and center, fill in the opening with a cup of hot boiled rice, which has been highly seasoned with salt, pepper and butter; pour over all a cream sauce. This makes an excellent cold weather dish when the meat course is light.

RICED SHRIMP

Boil rice southern style. While still warm press into cups two-thirds full. When cold remove from cup; dip into beaten yolks of eggs and then in bread crumbs; place these on a baking tin and let brown in a hot oven. Fry a minced onion in a tablespoonful of butter, when lightly brown add a heaping tablespoonful of flour, brown and add a pint of milk, stir until thickened and season with salt and pepper. Place the egged rice balls on a deep platter. Add (scattering them around the balls) a cupful of shrimp already cooked and cleaned or can of prepared shrimp made hot. Pour over them the gravy and serve.

RICE AND PEAS

Boil one cup of rice and boil twice the measure of peas with one-half pound of salt pork until tender but not broken. Add the rice to the peas, and there must be water enough to have them mix nicely, now add one-half cup of finely minced ham; a teaspoonful of grated onion and a tablespoonful of butter, simmer a few moments and serve.

Sleeper Wakes to See Pants Vanish; Another Slumberer Fights Marauder

Three Somerville homes were visited by thieves, who, in one instance escaped with money and jewelry totaling $236 in value.

Entering through an open window, thieves stole a diamond ring valued at $250, a plain ring valued at $5 and $81 in money, from the home of John B. Laghetto, No. 536 Somerville avenue.

A thief reached his hand through the open window of the first floor of the apartment at No. 86 Pearson road, West Somerville, and seized a pair of trousers, the property of the occupant, John C. Hobbs. Hobbs awoke to see his trousers vanish through the open window. They contained only a bunch of keys. The thief escaped with the pants.

The same process of thievery was tried at the home of Jonathan H. Phelps, No. 86 Pearson avenue. Phelps saved his trousers by hurling a shoe at the intruder.

Gasoline Goes Down, Not in Bay State

The reduction was made at the beginning of a movement on the part of the Standard Oil interests to lower prices, according to Walter C. Teagle, president of the New Jersey company.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreadful cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. Stocks Irregular in New York at Noon; Call Rate 8½%

RAIL AND STEEL ISSUES UP

Prices Higher in the Second Hour of an Active Market; Copper Down

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon but the market had a strong tone and rails and steels were up. In fact, the majority of issues were showing gains at the end of an active forenoon. The highest level was reached in the second hour. First hour transactions exceeded 280,000 shares. While most stocks improved after a weak start, coppers remained lower, although they got above their lowest. Rails, steels, oils and equipments led the market.

Among issues to show the largest gains were Reading, Southern Pacific, U. S. Steel, Car and Foundry, American Sugar, Atlantic Gulf, Canadian Pacific, Rock Island, Corn Products, General Electric, Kelly Tire, Retail Stores, Royal Dutch, Mexican Petroleum, Replogle, United Fruit and Union Pacific. They were up from one to two points. Baldwin recovered all its loss. In the foreign exchange market sterling opened unchanged and Continental rates a shade lower.

OFF AT THE OPENING.

Prices were off at the opening, and continued to decline for about thirty minutes, many new lows for 1920 being reached during that period. Among issues to make them were International Corporation, Hide and Leather common, Ship and Commerce, Marine preferred, Baldwin, Anaconda, Chino, Kennecott, Utah, Central Leather, Endicott Johnson, Crucible, U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, Tobacco Products, U. S. Rubber, White Oil and Ray Consolidated. Rails were irregular, but had the best tone of any class, with the exception of sugars. Motors ruled higher also. Oils were irregular and quiet. The downward movement affected shipping shares, coppers, steels and leathers to the greatest degree. Baldwin was an early feature, declining a couple of points after showing a small gain. It was dealt in on a large scale and figured in the usual mid-hour rally. Initial losses averaged small and this was true of gains then and later. About four points covered the first hour range.

READING IS STRONG RAIL.

The most active rails were Reading and Southern Pacific. The former was the strongest. American Sugar and Cuba Cane advanced a point or more. Liquidation of industrials was resumed as soon as trading began, but by 11 o'clock recoveries were the rule and the market verged on being strong. The rally was attributed to covering operations. The short interest is now so extended that price improvement is talked of as due because of the technical condition of the market, if for no other reason. Wall Street is rife with all kinds of rumors and much of the recent weakening of security prices is attributed to bear propaganda.

President Swift's Statement

President Louis F. Swift of Swift & Company made the following statement late last week: "I strongly advise the employes and other friends of Swift & Company, who own Swift & Company stock, not to sacrifice it at the current prices, and I also advise investors to purchase the stock for investment. Swift & Company's business is in a healthy condition. It is well organized, well financed and amply able to meet its usual dividend requirements. The packing business at present is in as favorable condition as it has been at any period during normal times and the prospects are excellent."

Cuban Loan Conference

There will be a conference in New York today between American bankers and Cuban sugar mill owners in regard to the latter obtaining financial aid in this country. It is said that the bond issue plan has ben abandoned and now it is decided to seek in banking pool loans aggregating from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000. Cuba objects to paying the high interest rate now required to float foreign bonds in this country. It is said that there is little hope in Cuba that the moratorium there will be lifted this year and it is feared that it may have to be extended for as late a period as March next.

HIGH RECORD U. S. TRADE WITH ITS TERRITORIES

The trade of the United States with the Philippines, Hawaii, Alaska and Porto Rico is likely to exceed $800,000,000 in 1920, according to the National City Bank estimate. This would be a high record figure. It was $552,000,000 for 1919. The bank says:

"The total trade with this non-contiguous territory in the eight months ending with August, 1920, was $606,000,000 against $533,000,000 in the full calendar year, 1919, and $236,000,000 in the full calendar year immediately preceding the war, 1913. In the single month of August, 1920, the latest for which we have figures, the total was $110,000,000 against $50,000,000 in August of the preceding year."

WAGE CUTTING DUE TO HUGE COPPER SURPLUS

Calumet & Hecla and its subsidiary companies will reduce salaries and wages 15 per cent. and the cut goes into effect tomorrow. Several Michigan mines will reduce mining forces and others will close. The huge copper surplus, moderate demand and high cost of production has put the copper industry in the worst straits known in many years. It is said concerning Copper Range that, regardless of any action about wages, it will not shut down its mines.

The huge amount of refined copper on hand is the most discouraging phase of the situation. It is estimated at 550,000,000 pounds and much of it was produced at war costs. Foreign consumption is at a minimum and this country cannot alone consume all it produces.

COPPERS LOWER IN BOSTON

Local Trading Active but Market Continues Weak; Curb Has Dull Start

The Boston Market was weak at the opening and all the morning. But there was a better tone to New England rails and packing issues ruled higher. The weakness was most pronounced on the part of copper. There is more pessimism than ever Among stocks to sell at year lows before noontime were Copper Range, Isle Royal, St. Mary's Land, Davis Daly, Simbs Magneto and Mexican Investment. Largest losses were shown by United Drug common and Edison, they being off two and one respectively. Strongest issues were U. S. Smelting, American Sugar preferred, United Drug first preferred and Swift International, they being up a point or more. The market was active and of good breadth. Carson Hill was especially active.

Fractional declines were sustained by Copper Range, Old Dominion, Quincy, Seneca, Davis Daly, National Leather, Simms Magneto and United Shoe. Among issues to make small gains were Boston & Maine, New Haven, New England Telephone, Greenfield Tap, Libby, Swift & Co. and North Butte.

CURB WAS WEAK.

The Curb market had a dull start and was weak as well as sluggish. Among early leaders were Black Hawk, Crystal, Merrimac Development and Verde Mines. Those to open higher included Albany Divide and Boston & Montana. Losses on opening sales were recorded against Allied Oil, Black Hawk, Boston & Wyoming, Denbigh, Eureka and Verde Mines.

At the end of an hour Black Hawk was off 6 cents at 19 cents, Merrimac Development 2 cents at 17 cents, Verde Mines 2 cents at 26 cents, Boston & Montana 1 cent at 40 cents and Eureka 3 cents at 45 cents. Crystal was up 1 cent at 60 cents.

For the third quarter of 1920 the Butte & Superior Mining Company reports a loss of $102,218, compared with a loss of $147,006 in the previous quarter, and profit of $627,250 in the first quarter.

It is said to be costing Calumet & Hecla close to 19 cents a pound to produce copper at present.

The New England Power Company has petitioned the Department of Public Utilities for permission to issue $250,000 additional preferred stock, making total preferred outstanding $6,314,000, and to issue $550,000 additional first mortgage bonds, making total outstanding $11,200,000.

The next government wool sale is scheduled for November 18, when about 4,000,000 pounds of low grades will be offered.

The Boston Stock Exchange announces that inasmuch as the permanent certificates common shares Orpheum Circuit, Inc., are now ready, the committee on securities rules that for the present either the temporary or permanent certificates may constitute the delivery, but that on and after Friday, November 19, the permanent certificates shall be the delivery.

Railroad Financing

A government loan of $1,840,700 to the Erie Railroad has been sanctioned by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the money is to be spent for freight equipment and property improvements. The road must provide $4,840,000 for the work on its own account.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway has asked Interstate Commerce Commission authority for the issuance of additional common stock to the amount of $50,225,000 for conversion of other bonds now outstanding against the company. The new stock would be issued in various amounts until 1936 for conversion of 5 per cent. convertible, 32-year, gold bonds due April 1, 1946.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Nov. 15.—Although somewhat irregular, with first prices 4 points lower to 10 points higher, the undertone of the cotton market was steady in the early dealings. Stability was most marked for late deliveries, which apparently were being absorbed for investors. Nearby months were easier under selling by Liverpool and the South and by room traders who were impressed by the unfavorable conditions in textile circles. At the end of twenty minutes the market was active and unsettled with prices about 10 points above initial levels. Opening prices were: December, 18.28; January, 17.70; March, 17.55; May, 17.50; July, 17.35; September, 17.10 bid; October, 17.05 to 17.07.

After Election Market Influences

Formerly in analyzing a market condition Wall Street had but to look about the country and form its conclusions from the crop condition, labor situation, railroad earnings, banking facilities or trade in general. Times have changed, however, and it is now necessary to carefully examine world-wide conditions to be able to arrive at intelligent explanations and reasonable conclusions as regarding actual market conditions and possible market trends.

Ordinarily, the recent election results would have been reflected in an immediate market improvement, and while we believe that the significance of this election will be a potent market factor sooner or later, the fact remains that the immediate market results were disappointing. Just how much this disappointment is reflected by the course of Foreign Exchange may still be problematical.

These conditions are ably and thoroughly discussed in our latest Weekly Market Digest, now ready. Also latest developments on

SOUTH END GIRLS AID WOUNDED

Chickering & Sons' Employes Answer Appeal of Veterans Published in American

The wounded and sick soldiers in the Polyclinic Hospital, New York, are not going to be bothered by the glare of sun and electric lights in their tired eyes any longer.

Their appeal to K. C. B. has reached other ears and as a result $17 goes forward to K. C. B. today for the purchase of the shades the government has not been able to afford for these suffering men.

The money was raised by the members of the Chickering Employes Social and Benevolent Association, of Chickering & Sons, No. 791 Tremont street, after they had read the following letter printed in the Boston American:

"Dear K. C. B.: After reading your articles in the paper every morning I came to the conclusion you could help us out.

"There are a bunch of us who 'got ours,' and have had to come back for operations, and as we lie in our beds the sun shines in and it is hot and uncomfortable.

"The reason is that we are on the top floor and there no curtains.

"I have been told that they have been trying since last January to get curtains, and all we have had is our blankets hung up at the windows, and now we need them nights. I thought you might get some people through your columns to donate to the hospital the twenty-one curtains that are needed.

"They would also help at night to keep the glare of the electric signs out so we could sleep.

"Trusting that you will sometime find space for this note, and that we will get the curtains, I beg to remain, A BUDDY."

That letter did the trick so far as the Chickering employes were concerned, for one of the girls at Chickering's has a brother in that very hospital.

So they started a subscription list headed by the slogan, "2 Bits is not much to keep the sun out of a wounded soldier's eyes."

The association was able to report a 100 per cent. subscription in a few hours after the list started on its rounds.

Liquidation in Commodities Still Depressing Business

Gloom has so thoroughly enveloped New England business that it would take special treatment by a Mr. Pickwick or Pollyanna to make much of an impression. About the only consolation manufacturers and dealers have is the fact that liquidation has been so drastic that economic forces must soon bring about a readjustment to better levels. There are few indications that "the turn" has come.

On the other hand there are many signs that the readjustment has increased its momentum. Commercial mortalities have been on the increase. H. G. Dun & Co. report that last week there were 250 failures, against 231 the previous week, 236 the preceding week and 123 the corresponding week last year.

But when one goes over the list of failures, that one finds a surprisingly few number of embarrassments that amount to much. There have been a few large silk companies that have gone to the wall, but not so many as one would expect in such a deflation movement as the present.

MORE INQUIRIES FOR GOODS.

The head of one of the largest independent worsted mills reports that his firm has received more inquiries for goods during the past two weeks than in the previous four months. This is a straw which indicates buying power.

Couple easier money and better labor conditions with this "feeling the market," and better times will be seen. One of the greatest evils that woolen and worsted mills have had to contend with has been the cancellation of orders. One reason why the Arlington Mills have been able to run at almost capacity is the fact that they held customers to contracts.

A travel through the wool and leather districts, among cotton cloth dealers and stock brokers, would leave one in a super-pessimistic state of mind. One would almost believe that this country of around 110,000,000 people, with banking resources of $50,000,000,000 and outstanding loans of $20,000,000,000, was going to the bowwows.

SLUMP IN SECURITIES.

Liquidation in the securities markets during the past year has been drastic. The past week witnessed a bad slump in prices. Today stocks are off about 32 per cent, as a whole from the top, reached last November. Some standard, well-seasoned securities are selling to yield from 8 to 12 per cent.

Some of the highly-speculative issues are selling to yield as high as 15 per cent, but purchasers must discount the probability of reduced dividends ere long.

Prominent bankers are predicting easier money in a month or two. They say that deflation in commodities has greatly reduced the demand for loans. Furthermore, handling of the bumper crops has been taken care of, and money should soon flow back to New York and Boston from the West.

Easier money will furnish the foundation for better business. It will be remembered that the money stringency has been the chief factor outside of the public boycott.

LOWER WAGES IN ORDER.

Wage reductions are being made on an increasing number of places. In some instances cuts have been as large as 20 per cent. With a decrease in the cost of living and increase in purchasing power of the dollar, lower wages are inevitable.

There are so many persons out of work now and jobs are getting so scarce that workmen are taking a reduction in pay rather than be out of work. Because manufacturers are receiving less for their goods they are forced to reduce expenses, and the labor cost is the largest.

$70,000 LIQUOR ROBBERY

Car Thieves Kidnap Watchman and Battle With Police Before Fleeing With Loot

New York, Nov. 15—Whiskey and alcohol valued at nearly $70,000 were stolen from freight cars in the South Broad street yards of the Pennsylvania railroad at Newark.

The thieves had stripped two cars of their cargoes and had almost emptied another car when they were attacked by Newark police reserves and forced to flee.

The robbery was carefully planned. Two hours before the thieves had been put to flight by the reserves, Patrolman James Gregory, of the Pennsylvania Railroad police force, who guards the South Broad street yards, was kidnaped by five men armed with revolvers. He was carried in an automobile to a town in Passaic county and deposited at the roadside.

Before the car thieves were routed they fought a pistol duel with the police, in which thirty shots were fired. The entire lot of whiskey and alcohol in the yards was valued at $200,000.

At least twenty men, the police say, took part in the robbery. None were caught. The thieves made their getaway with 48 cases of whiskey valued at $32,300 and forty-four barrels of alcohol valued at more than $35,000. Six trucks were used in hauling the stuff away. Two trucks were recovered, one loaded with twenty-three barrels of whiskey worth $17,500.

HEAVY GRANITE STONES HAULED THROUGH STREETS

Twelve pieces of granite, weighing thirty-five tons each, for use in the new John Hancock Building on Berkeley street, were transported from the railroad terminal to the stone cutters on First street, East Cambridge, by the teaming firm of Youlden, Smith & Hopkins.

This accomplishment has caused considerable interest among trucking men in Boston. They say it shows that this city possesses facilities and does not need to go to New York for everything.

The teaming concern used a large truck and it required ten horses to transport the heavy stones. After the blocks are shaped they will be taken to the new building. Hubert Smith, manager of the teaming concern, directed the job.

TRADE SLUMP UPSETS LONDON

Market's Attention Directed to Purchase of Gilt-Edge Securities

By Universal Service.

London, Nov. 15.—The fall in the rate of foreign exchange upset the market last week, and added to the uncertainty produced by the slump in trade. The ordinary speculative business has disappeared. Attention is now mainly directed to purchases of gilt edge securities.

Oil stocks continued to be sold. Mexican Eagles, Royal Dutch, Shells and Burmahs moving with the continental exchange rates. The Kaffir Circus was quiet. The high prices of gold are now over six pounds an ounce being offset by the outbreak of influenza in the Rand, together with the uncertainties of recruiting native labor.

Nothing occurred to relieve the gloom in the rubber market. The raw material is now being sold at practically a shilling a pound more. Failures are expected when further heavy consignments are placed, shattering the market.

Danish municipalities are raising money in America. Bergen obtained four million dollars from the National Liberty Bank of New York at the issue price of 98, bearing interest of 8 per cent, and payable in twenty-five years.

Copenhagen is negotiating for a loan of two to fifteen million dollars from an American group.

CONNECTICUT MILLS ON PART TIME SCHEDULE

Arctic, R. I., Nov. 15—Seven thousand six hundred hands employed in the B. B. & R. Knights Mfg. Co. mills in this valley and southern Massachusetts started work today on three days a week, with no immediate prospect of more work. Several other Rhode Island mills will start on the same schedule.

Owing to the fact that the several hundred hands employed by the Mystic Manufacturing Company at Mystic, Ct., refused by an almost unanimous vote to accept 15 per cent. reduction in wages, these mills did not start up today as expected, but are now closed indefinitely.

American Thread Mills at Willimantic started up today after a period of idleness on twenty-six and one-half days per week. Over 3,000 hands losing half time due to lack of orders. There is no talk of wage reduction.

America's Fisheries—An Undeveloped Industry of Great Possibilities

In its rich fisheries the United States possesses an undeveloped natural resource which needs only organization, capital and brains to make it one of the nation's greatest industries.

The American fisheries have hitherto been conducted so inefficiently that fish as an important food staple has failed to win the nation-wide popularity and market it deserves. So crude has been the organization of our fisheries, particularly as regards distribution, that fish in sufficient quantities and of good quality has been unobtainable regularly by much of our inland population.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries states that there is a huge unsatisfied demand for fish, especially in the Middle West and South. An enormously rich field awaits the wide-awake concern which enters the fish industry properly organized and equipped. In England, where twenty-five years ago the fisheries were in a chaotic state as here now, more capital is profitably employed in the fisheries than in the American beef industry. The American beef supply is decreasing, and the consumption of fish will constantly grow.

The problems of handling and distributing fish and beef are identical, and progressive concerns are meeting them the right way, equipped with ample capital, fleets of steam trawlers, big central plants and excellent merchandising systems. All honor to those companies for their far-sighted progressiveness!

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 10c and 30c.—Advertisement.

How to Beautify Your Complexion

By VIOLA DANA

That sensational actress, Viola Dana, who is recognized as an authority on beauty topics, says: "The best and quickest method of obtaining a beautiful rose-white complexion is to thoroughly cleanse the face night and morning, then apply that popular beautifier, Dorwilin, which has become a regular fad with over five hundred thousand discriminating girls and women in the United States." Dorwilin takes the place of face powder as it is more lifelike in appearance, its use cannot be detected and it stays on until you wash it off. Perspiration does not affect it, nor will it rub off on clothing, and the wonderful sale it has had proves that it is superior to all other beautifiers and face powders. There is nothing like it for dark, sallow skin, freckles, tan, coarse pores, wrinkles and many other facial blemishes. It is guaranteed absolutely harmless and sold at toilet counters everywhere with the understanding that if you don't like it they will give you back your money. Be sure to read the large article by Miss Dana soon to appear in this paper. It gives a world of valuable information on the care of the skin, something every girl and woman should know about. In the meantime get Dorwilin and try it today. You will be astonished at the quick results it gives.—Advertisement.

Tide of Emigration Check on Bolshevism in Latin Nation, Says Expert

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

This is Article No. 7 of the series written by Mr. Bertelli after several weeks spent in travelling throughout Italy studying industrial conditions.

Rome, Nov. 15.—Another fact that goes far toward making Bolshevism and revolution practically impossible in Italy is her great safety valve of emigration. Since the armistice more than 1,000,000 passports have been asked for at the central emigration bureau in Rome and very nearly 500,000 have been issued. Thirty thousand Italians sail from Italy every month chiefly for North and South America, and shipping accommodation has been booked by the Italian government of foreign lines for two years ahead.

The former strict laws concerning the size, speed and accomodations of Italian emigrant ships have been abrogated and for the first time in fifteen years single screw cargo boats are allowed to ply to and from the two Americas, and Italian ports are filled with an army of Italian young men and women, the majority of whom are skilled workers.

FAIL TO ADOPT U. S.

From this army of expatriated citizens Italy derives a yearly income of two billions lire gold, which is about double what she was receiving before the war. While the Italian in Italy has acquired more extravagant habits of life since the world conflict, it would seem, according to the opinion of emigrant experts, that the expatriated Italian workey resumes the parsimonial habits of old as soon as he is employed in a foreign country where his wages are higher and paid in gold dollars instead of paper lire.

"In spite of all the recent talk of "Americanization" in the United States, nothing seems to have been done in a practical way to induce Italian immigrants to adopt America as their place of residence. As clearly shown by statistics in the hands of Italian emigration authorities in Rome, practically all the expatriated Italians continue to send their earnings back to their native country to be invested in land, which they will find ready for their return as soon as they have accumulated enough to last them the rest of their lives.

ROME-BRAZIL NEGOTIATE.

About a year ago France asked the Italian government for men to reconstruct the devasted districts and to fill in the ranks of skilled and unskilled French workers lost in the war. Italy was ready to divert the emigrant stream from America to France on a condition that a labor charter, granting Italians the same rights and the same protection as enjoyed by French workmen, should be signed. Also the French government was asked to encourage the floating of a small Italian loan in Paris. Nothing has come of this as France, in her present financial position, is apparently unable to help any other country just now.

At the present time the Rome government is negotiating with Brazil, Italian emigration to the United States should be discouraged, while it should be made easy for them to go to Brazil. In exchange for that the South American republic is expected to guarantee protection to Italian immigrants and at the same time grant Italy a considerable loan in gold.

From every point of view it would seem as if the duty of a practically entire cessation of Italian emigration to the United States is approaching, unless strong measures are taken without delay.

LEGION BALL

Josephine Anastasi (top) and Mrs. R. Prezioso, to be aides at North End Legion Post's 'Victory Party.'

Do you dance?

Know the difference between the new intricacies of the Fox Trot, the One Step and all the rest of 'em?

There'll be a fine chance for you to show what you can do at the Victory Party to be given by the Women's Auxiliary of the North End Post, No. 53, American Legion, next Wednesday evening.

It is the first really large social affair the auxiliary has given and the ladies are going to make a big success of it. They have engaged the Michael Angelo School Hall, Charter street, Boston, for the evening.

Miss Margaret Reppucci, chairman of the committee on arrangements, has gone out of her way to find novelties, and the dances she has arranged for that night are of the very latest in the art.

State Department Commander James T. Duane and State Organizer James J. Mullen have been invited to be present.

Among those who are aiding Miss Reppucci to put the affair over the top with a snap are Adeline Lazzair, treasurer; Mary Palumbo, secretary; Jennie Cerisoli, and Beatrice Iannelli. The reception committee includes: Hilda Prisloso, chairman; Margaret Prezioso, Josephine Anastasi and Sabina Franchini.

That Bespeak Lower Prices

The fabric itself plays a leading role in the style show of the season. This is why one often encounters a handsome Gown or Cloak with little or no embellishment whatever—the charm lies in the Fabric.

Better still, prices are very attractive—in fact, many popular items listed here are VERY SPECIAL VALUES.

Combing Won't Rid Hair Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Advertisement.

JEWS PROTEST EVANGELIZING

Organize to Work Against Presbyterian Campaign to Christianize Their Race

Prominent Jews of Boston and other American cities are united today in protest against the announced plan of the Presbyterian Church for an evangelical campaign among the Jews of New York city.

In Boston the protest is headed by Louis Kirstein and F. Vorenberg, who are also prominent in the Jewish campaign for $3,500,000 in ten years for carrying on the revival of Judaism among the Hebrews themselves.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations has issued an appeal to all Jews in the United States to reply to the challenge of the Presbyterian Church by strengthening their allegiance to their own religious belief and supporting their own institutions more vigorously than ever before.

Rev. John Stuart Cummings of the Presbyterian Church, has already established headquarters at 156 Fifth avenue, New York, at head of the Department of Jewish Evangelization for the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions.

Speaking of this movement, J. Walter Freiberg of Cincinnati, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, declared that while at first disposed to regard it as an "impertinence for the Jewish faith is the mother of all existing Christian sects," the Hebrews of America are now inclined to accept it "as a challenge."

"The Presbyterian Church has seen fit to appropriate nearly $200,000 to bring Presbyterianism to Jews. We feel that the Jews of America will gladly give many times that amount for the preservation of Judaism, and for its regeneration and growth among the Jews themselves," said Mr. Freiberg.

Nation-Wide Drive Planned to Care for Jewish Orphans

American Jews are planning a nation-wide movement to take care of the war-made orphans of their race in the ruined cities of Europe. The drive is under the direction of the Joint Distribution Committee of the American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers, which has created a special orphans' committee to handle the work.

Briefly outlined the plan would have individual Americans and local Loan families pledge themselves to contribute $100 a year for the support in Europe of a Jewish orphan. Arrangements have been made for listing the needy Hebrew children in European cities, and for bringing the contributor on this side of the Atlantic in close touch with the beneficiary on the other.

It is estimated that there are not less than 300,000 orphaned Jewish children, ranging in age from six years upward. There are few under six because of the low birth rate of the war years and because so many of the infants died under the privations to which they were subjected.

It is intended that wherever possible the orphans shall be cared for in private homes of their native countries.

The plan also contemplates arrangements for bringing orphan children from Europe and placing them in the care of their relatives in this country where this is found to be practicable.

SEEK CLEWS TO TRAIN BANDITS

Omaha Loot $1,000,000, Says Detectives; Railway Men Set It at $20,000

Ohaha, Neb., Nov. 15.—Postoffice inspectors, Department of Justice agents, and the police forces of Council Bluffs and Omaha today are seeking clews that might enable them to run down bandits who robbed the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy fast mail train between Council Bluffs and Omaha.

Reports of the amount of the loot obtained vary today. It is declared by detectives working on the case that it will total $1,000,000. Railway officials declare that the amount taken will not exceed $20,000.

Ten pouches of registered mail were taken, some of them consigned to Chicago. It is believed that these pouches contained shipments of gold currency, bonds and stocks being sent by banks in California to their correspondents in Eastern cities. The value of the loot will not be definitely known until these shipments are traced and valued.

The robbery was discovered when a postal clerk was found chained to the floor of his car. The stolen treasure left San Francisco Wednesday on a Union Pacific train.

ALUMNAE TO AID WELLESLEY

Meet This Week to Solve Problem of Financing Extension of College

New York, Nov. 15.—Details of the Wellesley College conference on November 17 to which alumnae will attend from all over the country to discuss housing and other needs of Wellesley are announced by Mrs. William H. Coverdale, president of the New York Wellesley Club. More than 150 alumnae will answer the call sent out by President Ellen F. Pendleton.

Mrs. Dwight Morrow of New York will give the alumnae an account of the way in which Smith College overcame its financial obstacles, and how the Smith fund was raised. Wellesley has been hampered ever since its famous College Hall was destroyed by fire in 1914, many of the departments still being housed in temporary structures.

The first session Wednesday evening will be given over to a discussion of Wellesley assets, in which Mrs. Maud Wilder Goodwin, professor of history; Miss Fisher, professor of geology; Miss Martha Hale Shackford, professor of English literature; Miss Elisabeth Wheeler Manwaring, assistant professor of rhetoric; Miss Rosamond Hayward Vivian, professor of mathematics, and Miss Sophie Chantal Hart, professor of rhetoric, will take part.

Lewis Kennedy Morse, treasurer of the college; Edwin Farnham Greene, president of the board of trustees, and President Pendleton will speak at the second session on November 18. Dean Alice Vinton Wolfe and Mrs. Kingman Brewster, chairman of the Student-Alumnae Building Association, will also speak.

Plans for entertaining Wellesley's needs will be discussed by Miss Elsie Goddard of Plainfield, N. J.; Mrs. Kingman Brewster, Springfield, Mass.; Miss Grace O. Crocker of Cambridge, Mass.; Mrs. Herbert R. Shonk of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Miss Emma L. MacAlarney of New York, at this session. It will be followed by a tour of the grounds and the buildings, many of them temporary structures erected after the fire.

The conference will end Friday morning with a meeting of the Graduate Council, and a general meeting at which Miss Goddard will preside.

CHURCH NEEDS SHOWN IN ST. PAUL'S PAGEANT

How the laity may pledge itself anew to overcome the failure of the church in education, social service and missionary work was strikingly visualized by members of the church in the pageant "Advance the Line" at the Armistice Day celebration of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Newton Highlands Sunday night. Nearly 500 parishioners witnessed the graphic symbolism of the allegory through God's Messenger, a soldier, who in confession of his failure to the Soul of the Parish is given a new sword by three Guardian Angels to replace his wornout weapon that he may again begin the battle of life.

1000 Eggs In Every Hen

If You Keep Chickens, Cut This Out—Four to Seven Eggs a Week per Hen Through Cold Winter Season. With Eggs at Dollar a Dozen, Means $5.00 Profit per Hen in Next Six Months. Amazing Poultry Secrets Revealed By

AMERICA'S FOREMOST POULTRY EXPERT

This is an offer no reader of this paper who keeps chickens can afford to ignore. We will tell you why.

Henry Trafford, Famous Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of "Poultry Success," has developed a new and remarkable system of rearing, housing and feeding chickens for heavy egg production that seems certain to revolutionize the poultry industry and give five eggs or more for every egg produced today. This plan or system is explained in Mr. Trafford's "1,000 Egg Hen," a free copy of which will be sent to any person who keeps six hens or more.

Poultry keepers, following Mr. Trafford's directions, learn how to start young pullets laying early; make old hens moult quickly and resume heavy laying during entire winter season. Most any hen will lay in spring when eggs are cheap. Mr. Trafford tells how hens lay four to seven eggs a week during coldest winter days when eggs sell at a dollar a dozen or more. His system shows how any breeder, with ordinary care, may get 1,000 eggs or more from nearly every hen in five years' time at a net profit of $25.00.

There is big money to be made with chickens this winter by the man or woman who gets the eggs. The time to get the hens ready for heavy winter laying is now. Mr. Trafford's "1,000 Egg Hen" system tells how arrangements have been made whereby any reader of this paper may receive one copy absolutely free by using the Coupon below. Send no money, but cut out the Coupon and mail it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, 912P Tyne Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and the story of the 1,000 Egg Hen will be sent you by return mail.

Warned Barkeeper as Police Watched

Lawrence, Nov. 15.—While treating the saloon of William H. Ireland, No. 310 Essex street, Public Inspector Michael J. Moran had gone behind the counter and was making an investigation, suddenly a stranger rushed into the place and announced that he had a tip that the police were raiding in the vicinity.

"All right," said Moran, "close all the doors." The man rinsed himself and everybody else in the place. The raid was a success.

In commenting upon the numerous raids in Lawrence and Methuen shops, Judge Mahoney remarked that proprietors have carefully arranged to have stoke installed close to the barkeeper in case of sudden raids.

HARVARD, ON FORM, SHOULD HAVE EASY TASK DEFEATING YALE

Eli Showed Lack of Proper Training in Football Fundamentals in Princeton Game.

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Old Doctor F. B. Dope was sent down to the scrubs today—he fumbled three times in his eighteen chances on Saturday.

The famous prognosticator was bidded into thinking Yale was due to play football against Princeton, and it was in looking for a tough, even battle that he made one of his costly miscues.

He was engaged in similar thoughts concerning Syracuse in the latter's game with unheard-of Maryland when the second error was charged to him.

The third, coming when little Lehigh, although gaining only a tie, outplayed Penn State, was perhaps not so glaring for all along he had announced his belief that some late season opponent would show Penn State to be far less powerful than was the general opinion. He didn't expect the several-times-defeated Lehigh outfit to do so, however, so he acknowledges his error.

Because of the approaching Yale-Harvard game, the unexpected occurrence at the Palmer Memorial Stadium is today the most talked of happening in Eastern football circles. All in all it did not augur well for the attractiveness of the final game of the annual H-Y-P series, for while Harvard has yet to prove itself a powerful organization, Yale appeared so distinctly lacking in the fundamentals of the game that only 100 per cent. improvement in the next few days will make a real contest of it, and such improvements in so short a space seldom transpire.

There was no secret in Yale's downfall—the reasons were blatantly brought to the attention of even the most unschooled football followers in the vast Princeton audience.

Not more than two members of the Yale team evidenced any knowledge of how to tackle. Yale's end play, both offensively and defensively, was a sorry joke. Yale's ponderous line from tackle to tackle had no offensive charge, and whatever success enjoyed defensively was considerably attributable to its tremendous weight advantage. Yale's playing strategy—if such it can be called—was faulty in almost all department.

Had Yale boasted a knowledge of fundamental football and an ability to put that knowledge into practice, Princeton would have been forced to show a much superior brand of football to win. Except for the ancient trick play—the run from placement kick to formation—which gave the Tigers their first touchdown, the Princeton attack held little mystery for the Elis. Princeton's forward passing game was far less effective against Yale than against Harvard, while more often than not Yale's ends and tackles were on the Tigers who attempted runs from kick formations. In fact, the Yale men on such plays did not spread to check the dodging Princetonians, and their failure to make clean, hard tackles furnished the opportunity for Tiger success.

Yale when on the defense very apparently knew just where to be but didn't know what to do, or lacked the ability to do it once they got there.

Offensively, Yale showed many faults. The plays employed were never deceptive. Each one advertised itself before it got under way. The majority of them were sent at the Princeton line, but had the Yale forwards shown any offensive charge they might have proved successful. The Yale forwards, however, were consistently outcharged, so much so that when a Yale halfback attempted a run he scarcely would get under way before the Yale line would be forced back upon him, and repeatedly the Eli backs were checked by the very men who were supposed to be opening holes for them.

Dartmouth Makes Great Showing

Yale's adoption of a kicking game well within Yale territory was one of the least excusable of Yale's tactical errors. This move placed Yale on the defensive in its own territory at the very start of the game, in which position Yale remained until Princeton had negotiated its first goal from the field.

Just about now Cutie Spears' Dartmouth team appears to be as strong a football proposition as there is in the East. The Cornell game indicated Dartmouth's real strength, which strength was curtailed through costly injuries in the games with Penn State and Syracuse, and when the Green made such a showing Saturday against the Penn team that outplayed and very nearly outscored Pittsburgh the Green became generally recognized as one of the most powerful organizations to ever represent Dartmouth.

First Defeat for Lowell Indians

Lowell, Nov. 15.—The Indians of this city were beaten for the first time this season by the Neponset football team, the latter scoring 13 points to the locals' 6. B. Moulton scored two touchdowns for Neponset.

Williams Turns Trick on Wesleyan

Boston College after its second easy workout should be in prime shape to tackle "Greasy" Neale's undefeated Marietta team, providing, of courses, Jack Heaphy and others who have been injured return to the lineup as per expectation.

Marietta's record had been made against teams of unknown strength, so its real calibre will not be determined until Saturday's game gets underway.

Benny Boynton's Williams eleven avenged its defeat of last year when it rolled up a score of more than 50 points on Wesleyan, and dropped that team from the list of unbeaten elevens of the season.

Incidentally a most peculiar situation has been produced relative to the leading teams of the section. In the East only two teams have won all their games—they being Virginia Military Institute, which romped through Catholic University Saturday, and Stevens Institute of New York, which has not met any worthy opponents. All other undefeated teams have been tied, and also have shown plainly that they are not quite as powerful as many have been led to believe.

DARTMOUTH BEGINS PRACTICE FOR BROWN

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 15.—With every man in perfect condition except Captain Jim Robertson, the Dartmouth squad began the week's drill in preparation for Saturday's battle with Brown at Boston.

Merritt, Threshire and Bowen received minor injuries in the Penn game, but will be in shape for the Brown contest, it was announced. Captain Robertson is also expected to start against the Brunens.

Princeton Would Meet Harvard Again

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 15.—Princeton is happy today, in fact has been happy ever since the final whistle blew Saturday, for it is not every day that the Tiger takes the Bulldog into camp by the score of 20 to 0 in a game the Tiger wants to win more than any other during the entire year.

There is a lot of rivalry with Harvard, and a lot with some other colleges, but when all is said and done, Princeton would rather beat Yale than any other team on earth. A week ago there was general gloom because of the tie with Harvard. Today the wish that the Crimson had been beaten is still stronger, as while Old Nassau will undoubtedly be rated as among the very best in the country, Princeton men cannot but wish that they had one more scalp to hang up on the wall.

Because of this, another game with Harvard, to be staged in some neutral field, is fast becoming the topic of the day. The undergraduates are all for it, as they feel that no team can defeat Princeton now. None of the coaches have spoken against it. Bill Roper, when asked about plans, said that nothing had been done, and he knew nothing about what would be done. George Piper, undergraduate manager, said that "a play-off of the tie with Harvard is a possibility but not a probability."

Unless a challenge is issued soon, it will not be issued at all. The varsity team has been formally disbanded and has already broken training. A few days of this will cancel whatever chances there are of a game. Of course it would be of little use should Yale beat Harvard, but in view of the decisive defeat administered to Brown by the Crimson, in spite of the absence of six regulars who were down here watching the Tiger maul the Bulldog, undergraduates here can see nothing but a wave of Crimson floating over the Blue after the melee Saturday.

CHAMPIONS AGREE ON WEIGHT

Benny Leonard Concedes Many Pounds to Rival—Lightweights Dodge Him

By ED CURLEY

New York, Nov. 15.—Benny Leonard, the world's lightweight champion, possesses some very clear views on the question of weight. He thinks more on this subject since the evening he defied the world at Madison Square Garden. Also he thinks less of his contenders who sidestepped him when he offered 'em all a chance to fight.

"Get a man below or above his proper weight if you want to 'sure-thing' it," he said, "but never at his proper poundage if he's dangerous.

"That's the reason my rivals are dodging," he added. "Now that they know I can make the proper limit," he remarked, "you'd think I was poison the way they dodge me."

WILL FIGHT BRITTON.

"In all probability I'll fight Jack Britton for the welterweight title," he concluded, "and the more overweight Britton would carry the better would be my chances. Sad is the life of a champion." Then he sighed.

This is rather a strange existence for the three real champions, Dempsey, Leonard and Britton. Instead of being strictly on the defensive regarding challenges they have to curry the highways and byways to get action. 'Twasn't so in the good old days.

Leonard is in the most awkward position. When his rivals are offered a chance at the title, they demanded next to impossible sums. Maybe that's good judgment. When Leonard won the title from Welsh he received a little over $4,000, while the dethroned champion's share was more than three times that sum.

BOTH WANTED CHANCE.

Dempsey received practically a quarter of Willard's end when he crowned himself champion. These two leaders were only eager to obtain the opportunity to fight for the world's honors. That they displayed wisdom, results proved. Britton is forced to go around the country meeting welters and middleweights to earn an engagement, for it is composed of real fighters.

Judge Landis and Baseball

Judge Landis is an eminent jurist and a fine man. His acquisition by baseball is a big thing for the game. However, we are inclined to doubt the wisdom of his course in attempting to hold two jobs at the same time, especially such jobs as his.

We do not imply that Judge Landis cannot continue to be a fair and impartial Federal judge and simultaneously govern baseball with great success.

But it seems to us that one or the other position is of sufficient importance to merit the undivided attention of any man.

Baseball is in a sense a semi-public institution, yet, after all, it is carried on for the profit of private parties, the same as any other amusement business, while a Federal judge is essentially in the public service.

The public would scarcely approve of one of its judges heading an industrial corporation designed for private profit. The public rarely approves of its officials holding two jobs at the same time.

Baseball is paying Judge Landis $42,500 per year, with an additional $10,000 per year for expenses. The Government pays him $7,500 as a Federal judge. Baseball thus shows a higher appreciation of Judge Landis' worth than the Government, and makes his judgeship financially secondary to the baseball job.

There is, of course, no danger that Judge Landis will ever hold his Federal position secondary to his private position, but there is an old saw about a man being unable to serve two masters.

And Judge Landis is going to discover eventually that baseball, as well as the Government, is rather an exacting master.

BUGS BAER'S COLUMN

Cossack Champ in Six-Day Race

The six-day bike clinic opens next week in New York. If you need a new overcoat, obey that impulse. The boys will rattle around the revolving cage for six days and six nights, which proves that a bike rider's brains must be on a hunger strike.

The Twenty-second Regiment Armory will be a beautiful place to get your lungs upholstered with dust. Hang up your overcoat for a second and some philanthropist will save you the trouble of checking it during a long and dreary Winter.

Admission will be from fifty megs to a dollar. Seventy-five cents without bath. Gus Sprocketelvich, the famous Soviet bicyclist, expects to share in the prize money under the Soviet plan. Gus has his new bike with the egg-shaped wheels all set for the bicyclists' Old Home Week.

If he doesn't get four miles ahead by Tuesday Gus will go on a strike. He is confident and expects to win in a walkout.

Brilliant Rider Despite His Whiskers

Gus represented the Bolshevists at the Olimpics held in Vodka. On the last lap, his whiskers caught in his pedals and he wound himself up like a cuckoo clock. Abian Wallgren, the Swedish punch demonstrator won the race by a nose. Rollie Zeider once won a race that way, but was ruled off for unfair competition. Gus is determined that no accident shall gum his chances this time and has shaved his whiskers down to the boning point.

He is in fine shape, General Badpenny of the Cossacks, having donated three massacres for training quarters. Gus was accused of having a hand in the last frolic attended by the Czar. He was acquitted on this testimonial, but had to leave Russia when they found his fingerprints on a cake of soap.

Hero of the Rumors of War

Gus is a hero of the rumors of war. When things looked blackest on the eastern front he was as black as anybody. For sixteen straights months he fought without water in all the big barroom scraps. He finally fled into Siberia with General Moofski's army of 87,000,000 men and one toothbrush. At the peace conference Gus was awarded the mandate over the tooth brush, but refused the insult on the grounds of tradition. He told the jury that he had formed an opinion, and the judge sobered up in time to fall off the bench. This is the limit of Gus' bicycling, but he expects to win with his egg-shaped wheels.

CHAPTER I.

The Garden Where Jennie Grew.

LITTLE Jennie could trace her birth to some definite point, before which there was nothing and after which there was everything. Her beginning was a dark tank through years and years of sordid through the cruel [illegible] which have helped twist and [illegible] grotesquely develop [illegible]. Little stories have start[illegible] this history of Jennie Morrison and of her strange [illegible] Black Jerry, one of the three men who could her. And the [illegible] other persons who [illegible] influenced her [illegible] and not recall—this little [illegible] started perhaps [illegible] at Hallorary, on a certain [illegible] in October in the Pekin Cafe. For the Pekin had been Jennie's environment since her early childhood. Its habitues, many her friends, had all been familiar figures to her and upon such scenes as this evening she had peeped almost nightly.

On that [illegible] evening, in the little office at the rear of the smoke-fouled orchestra-dining room and cafe, at two noon, a bottle of imported mineral water [illegible] them. One was deep of chest and of powerful width of [illegible] and had a square, grim face with that stippled duskiness which the closest shaving cannot [illegible] from dark and heavily bristled skin. It was [illegible] swarthy [illegible] together with [illegible] shock of hair (forty had now marked it with a few lines of gray), which, long ago, in the quarter where every one who deviated from the average was tagged with his outstanding characteristic, had caused him to be rechristened "Black Jerry."

The other was as bland and open of manner as Jerry was grim and reticent. He was of [illegible] age—sixty might be near the mid[illegible] one's guess. Beneath [illegible] and jaw were deflated pouches, suggesting bulkier days when an unprotesting stomach had permitted a generous eating of all good things of the earth. His few short gray hairs were parted exactly in the middle; of eyebrows he had none at all, of eyelashes almost none. His gray eyes were genial, hand, shrewd—[illegible] wise and sophisticated and resourceful. Among his friends he was known as "Uncle George," though by blood or law he was uncle to none. At present he was out of his habitat, rarely in these, his more mellow years, did he wander below Fourteenth street, except as now to visit Black Jerry. Some thirty or forty blocks uptown, in the territory where stood the smartest restaurants of Broadway, and the seemingly more proper but really very similar hotels along Fifth avenue—that was Uncle George's home country.

Just now Jerry's face had relaxed somewhat of its grim control, for Jerry was in the company of a proved and trusted friend. But the relaxation was only partial. The habit of reticence and self-containment was so strong upon Jerry that he could not really let himself go even with such a friend as Uncle George.

"Now, see here, Jerry, what's worrying you?" insisted the older man.

"Nothing worth talking about, Uncle George."

"That's what you said before," returned Uncle George in a dry, drawling voice, but with a keen look at the other from his old eyes. "But, excuse me, Jerry, I'm not too wise a guy, and like to see both side of the case before I'm willing to call you a liar. What you say is that there are what is the more reckless party, who had no prize reward for his beauty in the place where it last was, right in the thoughtless moment try to say to you. But, Jerry, I'd be publicly insulting my own intelligence if I didn't mildly suggest to you that a hunk dont go with no bone-thing's worrying you, and worrying you big—or you wouldn't look like you do."

Uncle George might at times be cunning, even shifty, but just now all his [illegible] was [illegible] kindly. "Come on, Jerry, get it off your chest. Mebbe I can help you out! I see Casey leave all [illegible] Did that pain-clothes copper have anything to do with this smile of yours that won't come on?"

"Casey did me a favor once for me," admitted Black Jerry. "But I didn't let him get away with anything."

"Casey's a pretty square guy—for a copper."

"Oh, Casey's square enough."

What Did He Want?

"What did he want?—if you don't mind telling me."

"I don't mind telling you about Casey," returned Jerry in his heavy voice that seemed to have its origin in sub-diaphragmal [illegible]. "Casey comes in about a guy named Morrison. [illegible] or six weeks ago this Morrison blows in here, already carrying a lot of booze, with a party of friends. He orders the best eats and drinks in the house; he's short of dough, and asks me to cash a check for fifty. I feel he's safe and I cash it, and it goes through the bank all right. While he's here, being already stewed he loses his check-book. [illegible] Black Jerry—big trial ten years ago—how I nearly beat his case—one of the best [illegible] in New York [illegible]. And these people at the other tables, they're [illegible] enough, but they're no other—burglars, crackmen, pickpockets, confidence men, and I won't offend you by telling you what the women are—[illegible] Jerry has a daughter, pretty and smart—Jennie's her name. Won't I could [illegible] her father back in [illegible] apartment house? If you [illegible] her and Black Jerry together, you'd certainly see Heaven—what's [illegible]?"

The Guide Was Serious.

The guide became more serious. Professional experience had taught him that a bit of philosophy with a touch of sentiment, was always effective with these good people from out of town.

"I'm not one of those here sociology men—he went on "but did you ever think what [illegible] becomes of all the children of [illegible]—children who are born in this sort of surroundings and never know anything else? And there are millions of them! Ever think whether their parents [illegible] care for them—and if so, how they think what sort of [illegible] up to be? Something big to think about there, you bet! It's here got me guessing!"

The sightseers nodded excitedly; it was indeed something big to think about, and it had them guessing, too. From behind the screens Black Jerry stared keenly, suspiciously at the guide. The mouthing of that gentleman seemed to Jerry to be uncanny. It was as though his guise had stolen into the secret places of his own heart and mind places which he had not yet even explored.

Presently he became aware that the hall door just behind him was being gently opened. He stepped quietly to one side, keeping behind the door. There slipped in a slender girl of perhaps sixteen. She peeped cautiously through the door of the office Jerry had just left. Then she peered through the space between the screens and quickly surveyed the interior of the cafe. Excitement was flushing her face, and she was reaching out a hand to part the screens, when Jerry whispered sharply:

"Jennie!"

She whirled about.

"Dad!"

She was even more pretty, more than pretty—though not as pretty as she was later to be—with dusky skin and dark hair, and eyes of gleaming blackness. Her grace and lightness of figure she certainly could have had only from her mother; but in her rounded face there were hints of qualities that might be derivations from her father.

"What are you doing down here?" demanded Black Jerry.

"Aunt sent me to get two dollars for the washwoman."

Jerry did not speak his unbelief. He handed her the sum requested, and pointed at the door through which she had entered.

"Tell your aunt, when she wants any money, to wait till I come upstairs—or to come down for it herself. You better remember what I told you: you're to keep out of here."

"All right, dad"—and the girl slipped through the door.

Black Jerry gazed after her with narrowed eyes as she mounted the stairway; then he closed the door, and resumed his survey through the screens. The little young man and his showily dressed partner had finished their exhibition number, and couples from the tables were moving [illegible] open space. The latter young man crossed to the tables, where sat the sight-seeing group, and in a manner which was an effective blend of audacity and deference was inciting a young woman of the party to dance. She drew back, startled, but then was caught by the spirit of adventure, and rose and gave herself to [illegible] arms. Jerry's eyes were fixed upon the pair every instant; and when, the dance ended, the young man was bowing his partner into her chair, Jerry, without appearance of having hurried, and instantly through the screen and was slipping a hand through the young man's arm.

"Want a word with you, Slim," he said, and led the other into his little office and closed the door.

"Hello, Uncle George; glad to see you down among us once, guys," the young man said easily. "I say, Jerry—why the hurry in rushing me in here?"

"I wanted you here before you had a chance to pass it on to someone else," replied Jerry.

"Pass what on?"

"The watch you lifted off that young dame you danced with."

Smart Frocks for Winter

By Rita Stuyvesant

[illegible] of the best frocks for [illegible] are undoubtedly those [illegible] heavily embroidered, [illegible] a [illegible] of fan [illegible] a variety of [illegible]. And what [illegible] offers these little tan [illegible] can be. Plain tan without trimming falls into a graceful gown, but when one combines the tan with [illegible] de negre satin or [illegible], the result is most attractive.

Another interesting model a little [illegible] combination [illegible] with [illegible] and brown silk braid for outlining. It begins as a straight [illegible] but slashes the bottom [illegible] six narrow panels almost [illegible].

[illegible] their [illegible] are outlined [illegible] brown silk braid and looped under harem skirts to a foundation [illegible] brown [illegible]. A square neck and short sleeves are used on the bodice, and there is a good looking belt of brown leather [illegible] [illegible] a straight [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] brown wool embroidery lends [illegible] to another frock of tan [illegible]. This model favors the [illegible] are short and [illegible] are considered all the [illegible] large coin spots, forming a deep border. The bodice is fitted closely and is cut into a deep V to the waistline. Revers of brown [illegible] are [illegible] and there is a vest of the brown [illegible]. This model offers [illegible] for remodeling a frock [illegible]. Last season, and is particularly good for the full figure.

While such combinations wonderfully well in ten [illegible] for waistcoat, collar or vestee, and is easily laundered. Frocks that open at the front are showing some clever black-and-white effects from the white satin.

Time Waits—!

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

"AND he up with his hands before his face," before his shocked, delighted grandfather, and—who said time never stopped?—the clock waits for a heartbeat—a waiting eternity—while the daughter of the girl who once kissed the girl's father, below his tall gilt and mahogany form, kisses her lover's face and is kissed in return! The shiny old golden face grows into kindly shape, and somewhere in its intricate, whirring brass insides it's old heart skips a beat.

If ever you are suddenly, somewhere, in your snug room of a Winter's white night, or drinking your glass of red wine at a friend's table, or playing bridge with your friend's friends, caught with a strange sense that [illegible] happened recently that one of the families found it necessary to move to another city. And so the depreciation was agreed upon and the others bought out the fourth's share for a small sum each.

By this system the housewives were able to have the use of a vacuum cleaner, a bread mixer, an electric iron, a washing machine and mangle, a sewing machine and a phonograph. Not one of the families could have possessed these things individually. Yet, by co-operation, each enjoyed the last word in modern housekeeping devices.

Many women have said to me: It is all very well to recommend these labor-savers, but the average family that must pay rent and buy food and clothing absolutely cannot purchase any one laborsaver, not to mention half a dozen. Yet, it is these not-well-to-do women who are the very ones who need these helps, for they must do all the housework without the luxury of the once-a-week cleaner of the more prosperous. And co-operation seems to be the only solution.

But perhaps you do not like the woman upstairs or next door. There are very few people in the business world who particularly like their neighbors or associates. Yet they do business and get along.

So also should housewives who desire co-operative housekeeping put aside personal likes and dislikes and view the thing unemotionally from a business standpoint. Co-operative housekeeping is coming. And the woman of today should realize its benefits and start the ball rolling in the right direction.

Co-operative Housekeeping

By Loretto C. Lynch

An Expert on All Matters Having to Do With the Home

THERE is a marked difference between co-operative housekeeping and imposing upon the good-nature of the neighbors.

I have in mind a woman who borrows her neighbor's electric iron each week. She never has the decency to send the iron to the repair shop when it needs a thorough overhauling. Instead, she sends it back with a "Really, I do not know what is the matter with your iron. It doesn't seem to work right [illegible] all today."

I believe one reason two families find it difficult to live in the same home is because they disregard the rights of ownership. It seems to be part and parcel of human nature to take advantage of kindness if one allows it.

In one suburb I know four families who live in an apartment house. They have lived in this same house for several years. Long ago they decided that they ought to have certain labor-saving devices. And since they are not rich, they decided to purchase these articles on the co-operative basis. And so they drew up a regular contract, a copy of which each received. They had to purchase on the installment plan. One family paid the installment the first week, another the next, and so on, while all used the labor-savers in turn and only had to meet the payment once each month instead of once each week.

But, of course, repairs when they were needed were made and the expense shared by the others. It spare me the first edges of the shame and humiliation—until we have to be—certain."

A Terrible Thought

Suddenly I broke off. The meaning of the terrible trouble in Father Andrew's eyes came over me with a flash. It wasn't pity for me. It wasn't sorrow for himself, even though there should be some one to claim the place that had so long been his in fact as well as sentiment. There was some one else to whom all this must mean far more than it could to either of us.

"Oh, Father Andrew, forgive me!" I cried. "Forgive me!"

"I've nothing to forgive, Barbara Anne," he said. "No one could have expected aught different. It's only natural that you shouldn't rejoice to think that one who shamed you in life as in death has perhaps come back from the grave. He was gone and forgotten. And you were too honest to pretend that this strange return can make you happy. You didn't try to lie to me. Why should you? I say there's nothing to forgive, and your offer to go with me is like the dear heart that's planning already to make a poor old reprobate's last days happy if she finds him her kin."

"I'm not asking you to forgive me for that," I said. "I'm asking you to forgive me because I forgot the one to whom this means so frightfully much more than it ever can to me. Father Andrew, my heart's aching for Neal!"

"I dreaded the time when it would come to you," he whispered huskily.

"That's why you made them promise not to be married until you heard from or of your son? You want to be sure. You want me to see this man who says he's my father—and to make sure—"

"I want to make certain," said Father Andrew gently, "that when I married my Martha, the sweetest woman who ever suffered through a scoundrel—I want to make sure that when she gave me a child—there wasn't another man alive who was her husband in the sight of the law."

Oysters Do Grow On Trees

Within an hour and a half from Port of Spain, Trinidad, the little Island of Gasparee lies, bathed in tropical sunlight. It is not only the coolest and the most central of the islands, but contains a good hotel and is the home of the most experienced boatmen and guides to the fishing banks.

When you are tired of fishing in Gasparee, you may visit the caves, which are very interesting and in several of which you can take underground bathe in the lakes and big pools which they contain. Then on your way back to the Port of Spain, you can go through the one which is guarded on one side by mangrove trees, on which you will see iguanas scooping in the sun, and on the roots, if the tide be low, thousands of oysters, which caused Columbus and Sir Walter Raleigh's ferocity to be aroused when they wrote in their journals that oysters grew on trees in Trinidad.—Marjorie Gould Drexel, in Harper's Bazar for November.

A man, while traveling, got out at a station where the train stopped for a few minutes and entered the refreshment room. Casting his eye on a basket containing buns, he burst into tears.

The sympathetic barmaid gently asked him what was the matter, and elicited the following touching explanation:

"My dear young lady, pray excuse my natural emotion. Two years ago I was traveling on this line with my never-sufficiently-to-be-lamented wife. I did crave up in the refreshment room and scratched our initials on a bun which I still have in the basket. I beg you to let me have it as a souvenir."

And tendering two-pence he joyfully took the bun.

"CAN I be sure that the man they buried was my father?" I repeated after Father Andrew. "Why, it was—surely—wasn't it?"

"That's what we can't prove unless you saw him, unless you're sure," said Father Andrew, "Your mother thought it was. But there is a man alive today who claims to be your father. He says the man who was killed in the railroad wreck wasn't Lucky Les at all"——

"But the clothes," I interrupted. "I saw them. I knew them. The coat the reporter made me touch was one I'd seen my father wear."

"I'm afraid that proves nothing," replied the man I had thought of as my father through all the young years. "He had other suits. He might have given the one you saw to a pal. He was in hard luck. You remember that the money he had was won at it in his possession when they brought the body home to you."

"Yes, I remember that," I murmured, wondering where all this was leading us. "But we thought he had been robbed."

"I know, dear. My Martha told me that. But why don't know that he was robbed. You can't prove it."

"You mean that I can't prove it in a court of law that the body we buried was my father?" You mean that I can't disprove the claim of some one who chooses to say he's my father?"

Father Andrew shook his head sadly.

"You speak bitterly, dear," he said.

"I feel bitter!" I cried. "I don't want the ghost of a disreputable past rising now. I have nothing for which to blame or to revere my father. I had a starved childhood. Red plush and shameful affluence one week. The hall bedrooms of cheap boarding houses the next. And my poor little mother's shame and sadness through it all. Then death released us. And soon you came. I grew to think of you as my father. I'm proud to think of you as my father."

A Reassurance

"Barbara Anne, you'll always be my little girl, no matter what happens. No other man's claim can make you stop being my daughter. But have you thought what may be the condition of the man who brought you into the world?"

"Is he poor?" I gasped.

"Yes, dear. Poor and old. And he says in his need he heard of you, his daughter, of whose life he went because he felt he was degrading it. If this man actually did that much for you once, can you deny his claim on you now?"

"If this is my father, then when he pretended to die he deliberately left us to starve," I replied bitterly. "He had the money he won at the races. He didn't even share that with us."

Then the most terrible shame surged up from my heart and I cried: "Oh, what am I saying? It doesn't matter what he did. You say he's poor and old. And I have so much. If this is my father, Jim, I will help him. He must be taken care of. We'll do everything—perhaps I ought to go to Canada with you, I'll do that. For you think the man is Canada is—my father, don't you?"

"I'm afraid so," agreed Father Andrew.

"The telegram said so," I gasped. "Will you read it, dear?" asked Father Andrew, handing me the crumpled bit of yellow paper.

I smoothed it with one hand and held it against the steering wheel [illegible] and I'd crawled up in a little green cove in the roadside. Then, with blurring eyes, I read.

"No money to travel. Will meet you. Long to see my daughter again. As soon as strong enough will go to Canada. Must provide funds and look out for me. Pretty sick yet. Team will meet you Monday. Lucius Lucky Les."

"You wonderful man!" I cried, turning back to Father Andrew. "You're going to make sure. To

NO thoughtful mother with children in the house will risk being without a good, reliable laxative. It will save many a serious illness, many a doctor's visit.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a popular compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. It acts gently and mildly, and children take it without objection. A sixty-cent bottle is enough to last an average family many months. The ingredients are endorsed in the U. S. "I Have Been Using Mentho-Laxene for a Number of Years"

The foregoing quotation is similar to scores of others, written by the most intelligent people throughout America. Mrs. H. R. Bartlett, Hopedale, Mass., writes in part: "I have been using Mentho-Laxene for a number of years and find it the most effective cough remedy on the market; have recommended it to a number of others, etc." Ask yourself this question: "Would anyone use Mentho-Laxene 'for a number of years' if it was not the most effective cough medicine on the market?" For colds, coughs, bronchitis, hoarseness, whooping cough, catarrh of the throat, difficult breathing, and even asthma, it is quite the most efficient and cheapest good medicine anyone can find. It is pure and concentrated in 2½ oz. bottles with directions for making a full pint of cough syrup easily at home. It affects a saving of from two to three dollars—which is worth while in these days of high costs. Every bottle is guaranteed satisfactory by the makers. Your druggist has it or can get it from his jobber.—Advt.

FATHER OF THREE CHILDREN WRITES FROM PANAMA CANAL ZONE

Balboa, Canal Zone. A father of three children writes: "Will you kindly send me by mail two bottles of your Dr. True's Elixir. I cannot buy it here in Panama, and don't care to be without it in the house, because I have three children, and the Elixir is the best family remedy I ever used. When one of the children isn't feeling right, I give him a dose of Dr. True's Elixir and he comes out hale and hearty in the morning. Our children have showed no signs of worms since they have taken the Elixir. Last summer one of our boys was very sick —but one small bottle of your Elixir fixed him in fine shape." F. H. Purington.

The prescription, Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, has done wonders for sick—people, men, women and children. No harmful drugs—works quickly and effectively.—Advertisement.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug-store, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moth-patches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles and flabbiness, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered saxolite, one ounce; dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. Use as a wash lotion.—Advertisement.

"You are in trouble," he said. "Will you let me try to help you?"

A sob shook her—the beginning of a new paroxysm. He waited patiently until it was over. Suddenly she got rather wildly and unsteadily to her feet.

"I must go!" she cried. "Oh, God, what would I do if—if he wasn't there?"

Hodder rose, too. She had thrust herself into the aisle, but if he had not taken her arm she would have fallen. Thus they went together to the door of the church, and out into the white, burning sunlight. In spite of her weakness she seemed actually to be leading him, impelled by a strange force and fled down the steps of the porch to the sidewalk. And there she paused, seeing him still behind her. Fortunately, he had his hat in his hand.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"To take you home," he replied firmly, "you ought not to go alone."

A look of something like terror came into her eyes.

"Oh, no!" she protested, with a vehemence that surprised him. "I am strong. Oh, thank you, sir,—but I can go alone. It's Dicky—my little boy. I've never left him so long. I had gone for the medicine and I saw the church. I used to go to church, sir, before we had our troubles—and I just went in. It suddenly came over me that God might help me—the doctor can do nothing."

"I will go with you," he said.

She ceased to resist, as one submitting to the fatality of a superior will.

They were in Dalton street! She seemed to have forgotten his presence, her pace quickened as she turned into a gate and flew up a flight of dirty stone steps, broken and sagging. Hodder took in, subconsciously, that the house was a dingy grey, of three stories and a Mansard roof, with a bay window on the side and a fly-blown sign "Rooms to Rent" hanging in one window. Across the street, on a lot that had once held a similar dignified residence, was the yellow brick building of the "Albert Hotel," and next door, on the east, a remodelled house of "apartments" with speaking tubes in the doorway.

The woman led him up another flight of steps to the open door of the house, through a hallway covered with a ragged carpet, where a dilapidated walnut hat-rack stood, up the stairs, threading a dark passage that led into a low-ceiled, stifling room at the very back. A stout, slatternly person in a wrapper rose as they entered, but the mother cast herself down beside the lounge where the child was. Hodder had a moment of fear that she was indeed too late, so still the boy lay, so pathetically wan was the little face and wasted the form under the cotton nightgown. The mother passed her hand across his forehead.

"Dicky!" she whispered fearfully, Dicky!"

He opened his eyes and smiled at her, feebly.

The stout woman, who had been looking on with that intensity of sympathy of which the poor are capable, began waving gently the palm-leaf fan. She was German.

"He is so good, is Dicky. He smile at me when I fan him—once, twice. He complains not at all."

The mother took the fan from her hand.

"Thank you for staying with him, Mrs. Breitmann. I was gone longer than I expected." The fact that the child still lived, that she was again in his presence, the absorbing act of caring for him seemed to have calmed her.

"It is nothing, what I do," answered Mrs. Breitmann, and turned away reluctantly, the tears running on her cheeks. "When you go again, I come always, Mrs. Garvin. Ach!"

Her exclamation was caused by the sight of that tall figure and black coat of the rector, and as she left the room Mrs. Garvin turned. And he noticed in her eyes the same expression of dread they had held when she had protested against his coming.

"Please don't think that I'm not thankful——" she faltered.

"I am not offering you charity," he said. "Can you not take from other human beings what you have accepted from this woman who has just left?"

"Oh, sir, it isn't that!" she cried, with a look of trust, of appeal that was new. "I would do anything—I will do anything. But my husband —he is so bitter against the church, against ministers! If he came home and found you here——"

"I know—many people feel that way," he assented, "too many. But you cannot let a prejudice stand in the way of saving the boy's life, Mrs. Garvin."

"It is more than that. If you knew, sir——"

"Whatever it is," he interrupted, a little sternly, "it must not interfere. I will talk to your husband."

She was silent, gasping at him now questioningly, yet with the dawning hope of one whose strength is all but gone, and who has found at last a stronger to lean upon. The rector took the fan from her arrested hand and began to ply it.

"Listen, Mrs. Garvin. If you had come to the church half an hour later I should have been leaving the city for a place far distant."

"You were going away? You stayed on my account?"

"I much prefer to stay, if I can be of any use, and I think I can. I am sure I can. What is the matter with the child?"

"I don't know, sir—he just lies there listless and gets thinner and thinner and weaker and weaker. Sometimes he feels sick, but not often. The doctor don't seem to know."

"What doctor have you?"

"His name is Welling. He's around the corner."

"Exactly," said the rector. "This is a case for Dr. Jarvis, who is the best child specialist in the city. He is a friend of mine, and I intend to send for him at once. And the boy must go to a hospital—"

"Oh, I couldn't sir."

He had a poignant realization of the agony behind the cry. She breathed quickly through her parted lips, and from the yearning in her tired eyes—as she gazed at the poor little form—he averted his glance.

"Now, Mrs. Garvin, you must be sensible," he said. "This is no place for a sick child. And it is such a nice little hospital, the one I have in mind, and so many children get well there," he added, cheerfully.

"He wouldn't hear of it." Hodder comprehended that she was referring to her husband. She added inconsequently: "If I let him go, and he never came back! Oh, I couldn't do it—I couldn't."

He saw that it was the part of wisdom not to press her, to give her time to become accustomed to the idea. Come back—to what? His eye wandered about the room, that bespoke the last shifts of poverty, for he knew that none but the desperate were driven to these Dalton street houses, once the dwellings of the well-to-do, and all the more pitiful for the contrast. The heated air reeked with the smell of stale cooking. There was a gas stove at one side, a linoleum-covered table in the centre, littered with bottles, plates and pitchers, a bed and chairs which had known better days, now obviously bruised and battered by many enforced movings. In one corner was huddled a little group of toys.

He was suddenly and guiltily aware that the woman had followed his glance.

"We had them in Alder street," she said. "We might have been there yet, if we hadn't been foolish. It's a pretty street, sir—perhaps you know it—you take the Fanshawe avenue cars to Sherman Heights. The air is like the country there, and all the houses are new, and Dicky had a yard to play in, and he used to be so healthy and happy in it. . . . We were rich then—not what you'd call rich," she added apologetically, "but we owned a little home with six rooms, and my husband had a good place as bookkeeper in a grocery house, and every year for ten years we put something by, and the boy came. We never knew how well off we were, until it was taken away from us, I guess. And then Richard—he's my husband—put his savings into a company—he thought it was so safe, and we were to get 8 per cent.—and the company failed, and he fell sick and lost his place, and we had to sell the house, and since he got well again he's been going around trying for something else. Oh, he's tried so hard—every day, and all day long. You wouldn't believe it, sir. And he's so proud. He got a job as porter, but he wasn't able to hold it—he wasn't strong enough. . . . That was in April. It almost broke my heart to see him getting shabby—he used to look so tidy. And folks don't want you when you're shabby."

There sprang to Hodder's mind a sentence in a book he had recently read: "Our slums became filled with sick who need never have been sick; with derelicts who need never have been abandoned." . . .

Suddenly, out of the suffocating stillness of the afternoon a woman's voice was heard singing a concert hall air, accompanied by a piano played with vigor and abandon. And Hodder, following the sound, looked out across the grimy yard—to a window in the apartment house opposite.

"There's that girl again," said the mother, lifting her head. "She does sing nice, and play, poor thing! There was a time when I wouldn't have wanted to listen. But Dicky liked it so. . . . It's the very tune he loved. He don't seem to hear it now. He don't even ask for Mr. Bentley any more."

MISCELLANEOUS
DO IT TODAY

The bed bug and the cockroach occupy the house together; one plays the bedroom while the other plays the cellar. One makes sleep impossible with a very vicious bite, while the other raises blazes with the food in the night. They both have a system that is all their very own, and the only way to beat it is to protect your little home. Use Martin's Powders, for they're the very best; just sprinkle them around and they will do the rest.
Sold by drug and department stores everywhere for 60c and $1.20 per can, 5c and 10c extra by mail. Eleven different powders. Name kind when ordering. Registered in Maine.

Less Graft in Government Than in Big Business

The charge which the investigation committee, comprised of Republican members of Congress, have now published against the Shipping Board of graft and peculation on the part of its lesser officials will pain, but not shock, the country.

It is a great service which Congressman Walsh of Massachusetts and his colleagues on the committee are rendering. All those guilty ought to be run down, exposed and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

But until we change human nature we shall have more or less of this sort of thing. Probably less of it in the government service than in the great private corporations.

For example, it is notorious that for years and years in the big woolen and cotton mills the users of dyes grafted on their stockholders. They would insist on buying the particular dye through the purchase of which they could make something personally on the side, and if their superior tried another dye they would see that it failed.

But the great contrast, happily for the government, is with the railroads. Almost from the beginning of our railroads this kind of graft has gone on persistently. It was erected into a great, acknowledged system. Equipment was rarely ever bought on the level. The difference between the government and the railroads is that the graft in the government rarely ever touched the higher officials. They dwelt in a purer atmosphere altogether. It was the petty officials that grafted. But in the case of the railroads graft runs up and down from the top to the bottom and from the bottom to the top. It has become a system. Equipment companies were organized in which directors and presidents and vice-presidents have an interest and the poor railroad is obliged to buy at exorbitant prices and the stockholders and the public are obliged to pay the bill.

The difference between graft in the government service and graft in the railroad service under private management is great in several other respects. In railroads, under private management, nobody ever organizes a smelling committee to investigate the graft. There is no opposition party struggling to get into power and thus interested to watch every move that the management makes and to report every failure, every shortcoming on the part of the management or its subordinates to its stockholders, who bear the same relation to the railroads that the people at large bear to the public.

On the other hand, there is always an opposition party in the government organized to watch the conduct of the party in power and able lawyers comprise the vigilance committees. Though graft will exist while human nature remains unchanged, yet in the government service it does not exist long in any particular place nor is it erected into a monumental, permanent condition which lasts through decades unharried by any investigation or exposure.

Charles S Mellen, one of the ablest of our American railroad men and the goat of the great Morgan raid on New England, told a representative of the American once that he knew of but one man who had been a railroad president for the period of ten years who was not a millionaire. Our representative said to Mr. Mellen, "But none of them could save a million dollars out of their salary in ten years." Mr. Mellen, smiling significantly, said, "Certainly not, although their salaries are four times greater than they ought to be." Our representative then asked, "Is it by graft then?" To which Mr. Mellen replied, "Morally, yes. Often two-thirds of the time morally and legally, yes." Graft and watered stock, which is the worst kind of graft, is responsible for almost half the cost of our railroads. Think what our cost of living would be if the railroads had been built and managed honestly and if we did not have to support the great host of millionaires and multi-millionaires in this country whose fortunes have been founded on railroad chicane and graft.

When we have public ownership of the railroads we shall still have graft in the railroads, but it will be petty graft and often it will be discovered and men will go to jail. But no great families will be founded upon great fortunes made out of the railroad graft to be a menace and a mockery to democracy and to be a discouraging example to the morals of our young men who thus see dishonesty flourishing and honored.

There's a Good Time Coming

Business depression in this country will be brief and the coming boom the greatest and longest in commercial annals. Reasons for optimism are cogent and many, while the forebodings now oppressing the public are merely symptomatic of a reaction which was inevitable after the prodigal expenditures by governments and the extravagant living by people that resulted from war. This reaction was foreseen by financiers and captains of industry and that it did not cause appalling disaster is due to their prescience.

The world has passed its greatest crisis without a cataclysm and is on the mend. The recovery will come as quickly as the world conflict and human society is readjusting itself already to living and working as it did before international politics made slaughter its chief industry.

This country produces enough every eighteen months to more than pay all its debt and is going to produce more than ever. It has most of the world's gold in its coffers, more fuel and raw materials than any other and enough area to expand to the extent of national ambition without robbing any neighbor of land or trade. With more advantages than any other country and its characteristic energy there is no reason why times should be "hard" in the United States any longer than is necessary to clean house. Let every individual start to do the best he or she can in his own home, store, farm or shop and this country will have Prosperity to the limit!

DON'T WEAR OUT YOUR FRIENDSHIP

Why should you expect your best friends, even, to be doing you favors continually?

Even the warmest friends become weary if you impose too much on their friendship.

Don't get the habit of expecting too much of your friends.

They enjoy doing you a good turn, once in a while, but they do not care to be looked upon as a "steady" in helping you out of difficulties nor in doing things for you which you should be able to do for yourself.

You are getting into a bad habit if you rely on some friend to make up for your lack of effort, lack of ability or your lack of good judgment.

You ought to be able to conduct your own affairs independently.

It is an easy matter to run to your friends whenever trouble comes, but it gets easier the more you resort to this method and you get to do it over more and more trifling matters.

Soon your friends look upon you as a weakling, a bore or a genuine nuisance from which they would like to rid themselves.

Stand on your own feet and the exercise will do you good.

Oh, Woman, Why Won't You Behave?

By S. E. KISER

Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard, says that he is distressed because of the manner in which women are dressing themselves.

My grandpa—dear old soul, he's bald and toothless—
Has warned me to beware of women's wiles;
He tells me they are envious and ruthless,
That danger always lurks behind their smiles.
"They may, sometimes, seem gentle or high-minded"—
I'm quoting grandpa now, please understand—
"But don't you let them fool you! Don't be blinded;
They'll eat the fruit you've plucked, and bite your hand.

"THE shyness they pretend to have is merely
A trick that is intended to deceive;
They seldom hold affection half as dearly
As they are glad to lead you to believe;
Their purpose always is to bait and lure you;
If modesty will serve, you'll find them coy;
But if their coyness fails, let me assure you
That they will get you, anyhow, my boy.

"THEY bare their backs, if showing them is needed
To gain the end they always have in mind;
Since Eve began it, women have proceeded
To go to any lengths to lure mankind!"
Oh, woman, won't you find some new objective?
Please let your wish to lure and thrill be curbed,
So that the men who have become reflective
And bald and toothless may not be disturbed.

Letters to the Editor

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—I do not believe that the question of man's immortality will ever be solved by Mr. Edison's new invention. I have read with care his partial description of the way his apparatus is to work, and I fail to see any material difference between Mr. Edison's machine, that is to be, and the numerous other means already in existence and used by millions of men and women for just such purposes as Mr. Edison's machine is expected to achieve.

I refer here to table-tipping, slate-writing, spirit-photography, materialization, etc., etc. Quite a few scientists' names can be quoted who strongly believe that they have received positive proofs to the truth of all these in communicating with disembodied spirits; but, for all that, believers keep on believing while unbelievers remain as firm in their unbelief.

There's this about such things: What is a test to one often is not a test to another. To be convincing, tests must be individual ones.

Regarding your statement that "Force can act only through matter," of course, Mr. Edison's machine will be made of matter, and it is through it that the spirit forces are to be invited to work.

But to my mind, as much can be said by a table intelligently tipped as can be done through a more or less complicated apparatus, so that if one of the departed scientists really tried it should be very easy for him or her to spell out his or her message by the aid of table-tipping, at least, until Mr. Edison's machine becomes a fact. But, even if this machine turns out to be a success, as stated above, the test could be a test only to Mr. Edison himself. Those taking his word for it could be only believers without being in the least convinced.

Starving People Again

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—We read where the English government is going to change their warfare on the Irish, from direct murder to starvation, as they did in South Africa, where they starved women and children in the concentration camps during the Boer war. Some triumph for so-called civilization, English culture. How long will our country, America, stand idly by and allow this crime against a brave and friendly people go without a protest? There are few papers that are impartial news of the English savagery in Ireland, save the Hearst papers, and only for these truth? American journals one would be inclined to wonder what has become of American fair play. But I presume Lord Northcliffe, the chief English propagandist, is still busy in this country as his agents were during the late war for democracy.

RUNNING IN FRONT LIKE CARRYING THE FLAG

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company.

MANY race horses run well only when they are running in front.

As long as they lead the field they carry a terrific burst of speed, but they refuse to keep it up when other horses come up alongside them, or shove ahead.

They become discouraged and lag behind immediately. The idea of a contest seems to be repugnant to them, even though they could probably outrun the contesting horses if they kept going.

"He's strictly a front runner" is a familiar comment among the followers of racing, generally with a note of disparagement in their tones. They do not like the "strictly front runners." They love the game horses that will go on and keep trying, however close the struggle.

Human beings are often like the front running horses. If they are successful they move along blithely. The moment they are challenged by reverses they pull up, and quit trying.

In the big leagues are many baseball pitchers who are strictly front runners. If their mates make a number of tallies early in the game these pitchers will pitch wonderful baseball.

But the instant the other team ties the score, they lose all their effectiveness. I used to know a pitcher who had a big reputation, but whose manager invariably removed him whenever the opposing team got on even terms, because of the pitcher's inability to work well except when he was in front.

In a sense the front runner lacks courage or heart. He may win many a contest if he gets away well, but the good game fellow who can come on from away behind, and who will never admit defeat until the thing in hand is over, is a much better betting proposition.

I have seen pool and billiard players of considerable skill defeated by men of less ability because the latter had more courage. The size of the score against them never disturbed their nerve.

This front running might be made the theme of quite a discourse on how you should always keep up your courage no matter how far behind you may fall in the race but I want to tell you something.

I have never yet seen a man or an animal that did not run better and enjoy running more when they were running in front. I know I am that way.

You take a little poker game, for instance. Now and then I dabble in such matters just to pass the time away, and I find that I play much better if I am winning.

I find that my spirit is much lighter if there is a nice tall stack of checks in front of me than when they are so scarce I can hardly find them. The world seems bright and gay as my winnings grow, and I can think of many quips and jests.

In fact, I may say I am the life of any poker party in which I am well in front. When I am behind things seem much different. The faces of my opponents annoy me. I am moved to cutting remarks. The room is always too hot or too cold.

It is strange how sensitive I am to conditions generally when I am behind. Drafts disturb me. I could murder in cold blood the man who is looking over my shoulder, though a few moments before, when I was in front, I found pleasure in his audience because it gave me an opportunity to display my skill to an onlooker.

I am not what you might call a bad loser, but I certainly find the going out ahead much easier than the rest. I have yet to find a man who did not feel the same way about it, however much he may dissemble.

I have no use for the chap who comes around when I am struggling along far behind in any proposition and tells me to keep up my nerve, especially if the chap is himself out in front.

If he wants to give me a shove or permit me to hook onto his coat tails, well and good, otherwise his talk is about as valuable to me as if he had told me "play 'em close" when I am 'way, 'way behind in that poker game I've been talking about.

Anybody can run with courage and spirit when they run in front. And a great many run well, as I have said, from behind, but I have never yet seen a man who preferred the latter position to the former as a matter of choice.

CAMBRIDGE WOMAN IS FINDER OF SUNS

By Edgar Lucien Larkin,

Director of Mt. Lowe Observatory.

CAROLINE HERSCHEL, Maria Mitchell, Dorothea Klumpke Roberts and Annie J. Cannon are women astronomers who have each added to the sum of human knowledge. This task is now so toilsome and arduous that few in each generation succeed. I have often arbitrarily placed the number at fifty. That is, in each period of around forty-five years there appear fifty humans able to think a thought never thought by humans before, or make a discovery amid the simply magnificent laws of Nature that had never been discovered before.

I have been in astronomical observatories almost forty-six years, have met and talked with people from every nation and have answered probably half a million questions. These betray the sad fact that the people at large, in all that part of the earth termed Christendom, have not even rudimentary, elementary ideas of the universe. Only one in 500 has ever read a book on astronomy. Hundreds of millions of humans are born, live in this beautiful world, see it, gaze upon its splendors and die without having a trace of an idea as to the real nature of what has been before their almost blind eyes.

Harvard College Observatory Circular No. 221 has all been written by the now famous woman astronomer, Annie J. Cannon. Each word, each number, betrays toil, work and severe application totally unknown to the vast majority of women or men.

Miss Maury of Harvard, before the perfection of the telespectroscope, discovered eighteen suns having composite spectra. This was an achievement with the instruments at her disposal. But Annie J. Cannon has toiled in nightly vigils until she has actually discovered 261 suns that are now changing spectra.

I fear that the reader may not understand what the words toil and work mean. Spectra are bands of various kinds of light separated out by either a prismatic or diffraction grating spectroscope. But huge suns are changing the character of their light output, as revealed in spectra; and this within the short period of a transitory human life. Remember binary suns, i. e., where two revolve at high speed around their common centre of gravity, reveal changes in the photographs of their spectral lines and bands.

The lines mentioned in No. 221 are from hydrogen, helium, silicon and strontium, elements with which we are very familiar here on our earth. Now and then I dabble in such matters just to pass the time away, and I find that I play much better if I am winning.

Now, what became of the enormous volume of hydrogen—a rare gas here on earth—that is able to send its light of incandescence through trillions of miles to be seen in our spectroscopes? Imagination fails. This sun in Centauri is larger than our sun. The Quantity of glowing hydrogen is too immense to think of. It was seen in 1897, but was not visible in 1919. It vanished within twenty-one years. But if people like humans live on worlds like the earth, if there are such, what became of them? Humans here are all right, so far, but what would happen to them if the hydrogen now seen incandescent in our sun should all vanish in a few years?

After reading this significant circular I looked in a geography used in our high schools. It states in the children that this great nation, the good United States, is classed among other nations as "enlightened." But how can it be enlightened when only a minute fraction of the inhabitants have any real or coherent idea of the universe in which the Creator evidently has placed us for some purpose?
